Mr. Hoover on Crime
No More Poverty
Who Sold the Whiskey?
Lo, the Poor Farmer

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features Synd., Inc.

HERBERT HOOVER tells newspaper editors that crime is our problem, and it is not, chiefly, a prohibition problem.

The President, who sees the country's foundations subsiding, under crime's attack, says: "Nine thousand are murdered every year in the United States, little more than half as many arrested, less than one-sixth of the slayers convicted.

"At least 50 times as many robberies in proportion to population are committed in the United States as in Great Britain, and three times as many burglaries."

Prohibition has increased crime, says the President, "by the vast sums that are poured into the hands of criminal classes by patronage of illicit liquor, by otherwise responsible citizens.

"But only 8 per cent of crimes comes from the prohibition amendment."

How many crimes come from contempt of law and the Constitution, shown by the "otherwise responsible citizens?"

When the merchant and banker have their bootleggers, the highwayman feels that he has a right to his blackjack, the burglar, that it is his right to own and operate a jimmy.

The President, sincerely and courageously determined to enforce the prohibition law, will find it a task compared with which controlling Mississippi floods would be child's play.

The Berliner Tageblatt says Herbert Hoover's "fundamental object is abolition of poverty. The benefits of modern technique should come to the people as a whole. Equal rights for all and not merely for Wall Street and Rockefeller and Morgan."

You can't do Wall Street, Rockefeller or Morgan a greater favor than to abolish poverty. They don't make profits from poverty. Their profits come from the money that the average prosperous man spends. And the more he has, the more they get.

In New Jersey a "prominent engineer and clubman" is in jail, accused of driving while drunk and killing a garage attendant whose leg was sheared off by the "prominent engineer's" running board.

In New York a negro, accused of attacking women in the subway, says: "I finished my work, had a few drinks and went home." That's all he remembers.

How about the gentleman that supplied whiskey to these men?

Have the authorities made any effort to identify and punish the whiskey sellers? Not yet.

Frank Pellegi of Mansfield, Ohio, owns a "soft drink parlor," but won't own it long.

A prohibition agent shot Pellegi, who is dying, his wife and six children watching him.

The agent says Pellegi sold whiskey, but wouldn't let the agent take it out of the soft drink parlor, so the agent shot Pellegi.

Prohibition is a complicated institution.

The "William and Mary" plan to subsidize exports of farm products is rejected by Mr. Hoover. The Senate plans, nevertheless, to try it.

The plan is to give farmers exporting wheat, etc., a bonus of one-half the American tariff on all the wheat or other farm products exported.

After consulting the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce and the Treasury, Mr. Hoover says the plan would enrich speculators and reduce world prices since foreign markets would have to meet the competition of subsidized products.

Also, says the President, the plan would cost the country $200,000,000 a year, cause much bankruptcy and it would not solve the farm problem.

Farmers will cease moaning when they realize that the bonus money would be paid not direct to them but to merchants exporting products.

It needs "no ghost come from the grave" to tell farmers how little they would get of that bonus. Wheat gamblers and the middle men would get it. The farmer in his taxes would have to pay part of it.

In California a passenger and an army plane colliding in mid air, killing six, should cause authorities to enforce definite rules for flying.

Those that witnessed the crash described the swift army pursuit plane "manoeuvring apparently with ease about the larger passenger plane doing stunts."

STATEMENT BY PUBLIC TRUSTEES OF EASTERN MASSACHUSETTS

Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company offers the following statement of facts for the consideration of the public whom it serves and the employees who, on cars and in shops, assist in furnishing the service.

This Company, by virtue of what amounts to an agreement between its stockholders and directors on the one part, and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts on the other part, is operated by the Commonwealth, that is to say, its direct management is fixed in a Board of Trustees, two of whom are appointed by His Excellency the Governor, and the third by the Directors of the Company. The Trustees appointed by the Governor may be removed by him for cause.

A great majority of the employees, including blue uniform men, shop men and carhouse workers, are members of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employees of America. This union was for many years, prior to the public management of the road, recognized and dealt with by the predecessor of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company, and this policy has been followed by the Public Trustees. In cases of disagreement as to questions of wages and working conditions both parties have respected the decision of an arbitrator. Nominally, this decision was left to three arbitrators, but really there was only one, since a custom of years' standing sanctioned the selection of two arbitrators, who practically represented the parties interested and who were paid by the parties interested, and the third arbitrator, supposedly impartial, was paid by both parties.

As a result of these various arbitrations and of successive agreements between the Company and the Union, wages have been greatly increased, working hours have been decreased, and working conditions have been made progressively more favorable to the men during almost the whole period of public control.

In addition to this, the Company has voluntarily and at considerable expense to itself provided for its employees working in the shops and on the cars an old-age non-contributory pension system and a group insurance system. By means of the former, employees who have worked for the Company 20 years and are 70 years old are retired with a comfortable pension, sufficient at least to provide a livelihood for their remaining days. By means of the latter, there is paid immediately to the beneficiary of an employee who dies after being 10 years in the Company's service the sum of $1200. The employees have not been asked to contribute one cent toward establishing this pension fund or paying the premium for the insurance.

The present working agreement between the Company and the Union expires on the first day of May, 1929. While it is unsatisfactory to the Company in many respects and especially so by reason of the rate of wages fixed by the last neutral arbitrator, the Trustees have stated to the representatives of the Union that they would favorably consider the renewal of the agreement with the exception of one article. That one article provides that the Union may insist upon a separate arbitration for every dispute involving the discharge or suspension of an employee for any cause. The Trustees feel that as public officers they should not be required to submit to any outsider a question of discipline involving their rights to discharge or suspend an employee upon whose capacity and willingness to render faithful service may depend the life and limb of the traveling public.

As a substitute for the article relative to arbitration of discipline, the Trustees state that any employee discharged or suspended may have his case reviewed by the Board of Trustees, who stipulate their intention to pass upon each and every case on its merits, without prejudice or bias and with a regard only to the facts. These facts may be presented by the employee affected and his witnesses and in this presentation he may be represented by Union officials or by such counsel as he shall select.

The Union has so far refused to enter into a further agreement unless the article for the arbitration of individual discipline cases is made a part thereof.

If we are going to give the public the service to which it is entitled, we must have a reasonable degree of control over employees, and these time-wasting arbitrations which disturb harmonious relations and destroy the morale of our organization should not be continued.

Representatives of the Union have, however, already been informed that the Public Trustees are willing presently to submit to the State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation the whole question of a new working agreement with the Amalgamated, including the disposition of discipline cases, and abide by the result. The Trustees have not receded from that position.

NEW ATTACK LAUNCHED AGAINST BIG POWER TRUST METHODS

EFFORT TO BARE ALL SECRETS

an intensive investigation by the House of Representatives.

McNulty and the other proponents of his measure appeared before the House committee on rules, asking the suspension of the rules to admit the order.

He called special attention to the revealed distribution of 70,000 pamphlets to New England high schools by the New England Bureau of Public Service Information, representing electric lights and power associations of this state and nation.

His guns were also leveled at President Preston S. Arkwright of the National Electric Light Association who made the open book claim in a recent radio address.

SHAPING PUBLIC OPINION

The Power Trust's alleged use of its millions in shaping and influencing public opinion was emphasized by other speakers who cited glaring instances of its propaganda, its interference with education and its "grab" of Massachusetts companies.

As the McNulty measure asks for a probe by members of the House only, it is considered by many solons as their best weapon in the fight o nthe big power combines.

The special committee of members of the House, for which the measure provides, would "investigate certain paper and pulp manufacturing companies, power, light and other interests, and ascertain that exten t to which companies are attempting to shape public sentiment by propaganda or the expenditure of money in any university, technical institute, private school, public school, business or commercial association, or newspaper."

POSTPONEMENT SOUGHT.

When the hearing opened Speaker Saltonstall, the chairman of the House rules committee said if Representative McNulty was willing the hearing would be put off until the outcome of the hearing on the other investigation measure, which came up before the rules committees of House and Senate sitting concurrently, was known.

But McNulty would not agree, and the hearing proceeded.

"Massachusetts is confronted with one of the most gigantic schemes ever started in the United States to control the newspapers," said Representative McNulty, opening the session as the first speaker.

"Such control of newspapers would be fraught with grave political consequences. It is to be deplored in this law-and-order State. There is no telling what the result there would be if this 'open-door' policy with regard to the purchase of newspapers is continued.

WANTS ALL THE DETAILS.

"The sale of the two Boston newspapers was not announced to the public. It leaked out. I don't know but what that deal was put through as early as last August. This order of mine will probably unearth all the details.

Vice-president Hurlbut of the International Paper Company said that the reason for acquiring the Herald-Traveler was to have an outlet for the paper his company manufacturers. But the product of the International Paper & Power Company is $5 per cent power, 15 per cent paper.

"If the truth were known it would doubtless be found that the Herald-Traveler was buying its paper from that company anyway, and as a matter of fact the International people sold all their paper output last year and therefore couldn't get any more business by this purchase.

WHAT PRICE PAID

"The purchase price is understood to have been $5,000,000, but might greatly exceed that figure."

Samuel T. MacQuarrie, director of the New England Bureau of Public Service Information, has testified at Washingto n that 70,000 pamphlets were distributed to New England high schools. That ought to be looked into.

"The Worcester Post last night printed a letter from Frank R. Comerford, president of the New England Power Company, notifying Publisher Fahey that the Worcester rate case was to be withdrawn from the federal courts on or about May 1 and that Worcester would get a reduction in rates to five cents on May 1.

"Here is a case where the light of publicity has doubtless had a great deal of influence on lowering of rates.

"Surely no harm can be done by this proposed investigation. If this thing is allowed to go on the state will find itself helpless.

WHER'S THE "OPEN BOOK"

EDISON CO. WILL BUY WOOLEN PLANT LINES

Under an agreement between the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston and the American Woolen Company, $381,000 will be paid by the Edison for the latter's distributing equipment, the book value of which is $115,000.

Authority for the sale was asked at a public hearing from the public utilities commission by representatives of both companies.

W. S. Allen, representing the towns of Acton and Maynard, favored the sale, declaring it would mean lower rates for the residents of these two communities.

Atty. Frederick M. Ives, for the Edison company, said it would cost his company $185,000 to extend the lines and connect with the distribution plant in Maynard. The woolen company, he said, now serves these towns.

While the book value of the equipment is nut $115,000, President Charles L. Edgar of the Edison said it is customary to pay more for such equipment.

100 PERISH AS JAP VESSEL GOES DOWN

Tokio, April 23 (AP)—More than a hundred persons were believed drowned when the Japanese steamship Toyo Kuni Maru sank a few minutes after striking rocks of Cape Erimo, in southern Hakkaido.

The vessel sank so quickly there was only time to send out a single SOS.

Two steamers which reached the scene early this morning, several hours after the sinking, picked up 97 persons. Two hundred and nine were known to have been aboard.

Several naval craft left Ominato to aid in the search, but it was feared there was small prospect for other survivors.

The 176 passengers carried by the steamer were fishermen bound for Kamchatka, where they were to fish for crabs during the summer.

The disaster was believed due to bad weather in the wake of Sunday's hurricane, which was followed by a gale and a snowstorm off the coast of Hokkaido, and in the vicinity of Hakodate.

Divorced Couple Want to Remarry

Nels and Fannie Johnson of Quincy, divorced couple, held on a slaying charge, today applied in Quincy court for waiver so that they can remarry.

Mrs. Mary Fitzpatrick, of the same address, produced her husband's heavy shirts as additional evidence.

U. S. BEATEN IN NAVAL PARLEY, SAYS BRITTEN

Washington, April 23—The American Government has sacrificed the principles of naval limitation for which it fought at Geneva last year and again has bowed to British diplomacy, Representative Fred A. Britten (Rep.) of Illinois, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, declared today.

While the statement of Ambassador Hugh Gibson at Geneva yesterday was being widely praised, Britten scathingly denounced it.

"British statesmen have persistently refused," he said, "to agree to any plan whereby we might build the type of cruisers best adapted to American usage.

"When we propose limitations by categories, we are preparing the way for another disastrous conference which may result in more serious to our national defense than the Washington agreement turned out to be."

Congress never again would approve a treaty that places the American navy "in a secondary position" and any proposal that fails to give serious military value to the many British naval bases is "unfair to other leading powers who do not enjoy their valuable facilities," Britten said.

Geneva Sees Agreement on American Terms

Geneva, April 3 (AP)—In the light of their unquestioned background of compromise there was growing belief at Geneva today that American disarmament proposals broached yesterday by Ambassador Hugh L. Gibson might have made possible a disarmament agreement

Some observers likened them to proposals of Elihu Root for American adherence to the world court.

Belgian proposals for reciprocal prohibition of use of poison gas in war and absolutely prohibiting bacteriological warfare, were adopted today with a draft resolution of the Soviet delegation urging governments to ratify the Geneva protocol of 1925 which also prohibits use of poison gas and bacteria.

there and sent him to Philadelphia.

No details of the finding of the girl were communicated to the Everett authorities. She was believed by her father to have gone to New York to enter motion pictures, and her appearance in Philadelphia was simultaneous with the beginning of a search that was to extend through the East.

The girl, a student at Everett junior high school, left her Everett home about 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, carrying a brief case containing some music sheets and ostensibly bound for the home of an acquaintance.

When she did not return that night Rev. Darling notified police and the Travelers' Aid Society.

She had about $30 in her purse when she left home, evidently coming to Boston and entraining at once for New York. How much time she spent there and when she went to Philadelphia will not be determined until she returns.

It is believed likely that the initials "E. D." printed on her brief case, led to her identification in Philadelphia.

She was an ardent admirer of motion picture actresses and vaudeville performers, according to relatives, and probably went to Philadelphia after failing to obtain employment on the stage or before the cameras in New York.

Her father, called by the Quincy church only two weeks ago, has devoted his entire time to the search since her disappearance. Her mother, prostrated by her act, was considerably improved after receiving news she had been found.

She is expected to start home with her father late today.

RIVAL MEXICAN ARMIES NEARING FINAL BATTLE

Mexico City, April 23 (AP)—News was expected today of initial clashes near Maniaca, Sonora, between the principal rebel army entrenched there and advancing federal forces of Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles.

Last reports from Gen. Talamantes, commanding 2000 scouting federal cavalry, said he had advanced as far as Luis, 12 miles south of Maniaca, but had found no enemy.

He was advised to be careful of ambuscades and not move too far ahead of the main army lest rebels at Maniaca cut his cavalry to pieces before reinforcements arrive.

Mexican rebels at Juarez today claimed their forces are being supplied with war munitions from Germany, but declined to say whether they are being shipped by the German government, or by private corporations.

PROBER SEES MURDER IN GIRL CASE

Wierbrick, 15-year-old high school girl, began.

Heitzen is the special investigator appointed by the Attorney-General to probe the death of the schoolgirl found lifeless on the railroad tracks here two weeks' ago.

"Despite a feeling among police of Central Falls and Pawtucket that Florence took her own life, I am dissatisfied with that theory," Heitzen declared, promising "important disclosures" at the inquest.

Two important witnesses were to testify today before Dr. George J. Howe, coroner, while Frederick W. Wheeler, former teacher at the school where Florence was an honor student, was in seclusion at Worcester Mass.

Wheeler is at liberty in $10,000 bail awaiting trial on charges arising out of a romance with Florence.

Coroner Howe announced today that he would not call Anthony Wierbrick, the dead girl's father.

Coroner Howe took occasion to deny general reports to the effect that police had gone on record as characterizing the Weirbrick girl's death as suicide.

"There has been no official pronouncement," Howe said "The eventual finding may be suicide or it may be murder; no one can now say which."

A coming witness to whose testimony the coroner attached much importance was Deputy Chief Joseph Chaput of the Central Falls police department.

Chaput had full charge of the investigation conducted by the Central Falls and Pawtucket authorities following the discovery of Miss Weirbrick's mangled body on the tracks of the New Haven railroad near the Cross st., Central Falls, bridge.

WHEELER GRILLED

He grilled Wheeler, the girl's confessed love idol He interviewed all other persons known to have played a part in the young victim's life.

Coroner Howe admittedly expected Chaput to break his official silence and cast new light on the tragedy today.

Another principal witness who was prepared to appear at the inquest today was Mrs. Agnes Conway of Providence, married sister of the Weirbrick girl. Mrs. Conway was the one first started the fight to prove that the attractive young Pawtucket student did not take her own life.

She was ready today to give her reasons for believing that her "kid sister" was slain by someone who covered up the crime by casting the body on the railroad tracks to be mutilated by passing trains.

PASTOR'S STATEMENT

In recognition of the rising tide of public opinion, the Rev. Irving Mahlon Wilder, pastor of the Smithfield Avenue Congregational Church, made public today a statement in which he justified himself for having failed to go to the police when, on the eve of Miss Weirbrick's death, Wheeler came to him confessing relations with the girl and asserting that she contemplated suicide.

"How could I go to the police?" Dr. Wilder demanded. "I did not know the girl's name. I was bound by my religious duty to keep inviolate the identity of the penitent who sought my help. I had no knowledge of any crime committed or contemplated. The police would have sneered at me as a lunatic.

MAY BE AUTOPSY

"I owe it to myself, my church, and the public to take notice of widely circulated statements. I take my ideal of a faithful minister from the New Testament, not from the police."

As testimony at the inquest was resumed today, Miss Weirbrick's body was once more in its grave at St. Anne's Cemetery, Cranston. Several of the girl's organs were retrieved by State Chemist Franklin Strickland for further analysis. Results of the second autopsy were yet to be announced.

FIRST TEST FOR 'ORIGINS' ACT

Senator Nye (Rep.) of North Dakota, the author of one of the repeal bills, and Chairman Johnson of the committee voted against postponement. Senator Gould (Rep.) of Maine was present, but he did not vote.

Senator King (Dem.) of Utah, another foe of the national origins quota restriction, arrived late, but his vote would not have changed the count.

Senators Nye and King both announced they would go to the Senate floor and there move for the discharge of the bills from jurisdiction of the immigration committee. If successful, such a step would force the immigration controversy before the Senate.

The resolution for discharge of the committee is expected at least to serve as an early test of strength of the question.

1928 Summer White House Is for Sale

Superior, Wis., April 23 (AP)—Calvin Coolidge's 1928 summer home is for sale. The 4400-acre estate of Henry Clay Pierce and Cedar Island Lodge, the 1928 summer White House, has been put into the hands of a Minneapolis real estate concern.

Although the price of the property was not announced it was estimated the land through which runs the Brule River was valued at 2 million dollars.

PHELAN NOT ANGRY AT LOVE, SAYS GIRL

FINANCIER MAY SEE HER WED GOLFER

HEIRESS TO WED GOLFER

Miss Caroline Phelan, daughter of James J. Phelan, Boston banker, and her fiance, Joseph Norton, one-time golfing star, today denied there was any friction with her family over their approaching marriage.

Miss Phelan, seen at the home of friends in Auburndale, said she had not left home because of a disagreement with her family, and repudiated statements attributed to her in which she was alleged to have declared she would not submit to dictation by her father regarding her romance.

She was sustained by Norton, son of a wealthy Albany, N. Y., family, who said members of both families would be present at the ceremony, the date of which had not been fixed. It is understood the ceremony will take place in the parish house of St. Ignatius Loyola Church at Boston College.

"It is too bad," said Norton, "that a girl cannot visit friends without the purpose of her visit being misconstrued."

The girl's father was non-committal when questioned concerning a rift in the Phelan domestic lute. He refused to affirm or deny that his daughter had left home because of a disagreement over the planned marriage to Norton, or to say whether or not he would attend the wedding.

SAYS SHE ISN'T AT ODDS WITH FATHER

EX-BURLESQUE QUEEN QUITS RICH HUBBY

Gertrude Hayes, Jr., former-burlesque queen, whose three-cornered romance six years ago resulted in Grand Jury action, an alienation suit and an elopement, has come to the parting of the ways with the man she finally married.

The stage star, who secretly wed Joseph H. Laffey, wealthy Malden widower, after an elopement to New York in the summer of 1928, has separated from her husband and is living apart from him, it was learned today.

The now Mrs. Laffey is living in Brighton with a girl friend and in conference of attorneys to settle the future marital status of herself and husband and custody of their two children was held today.

Announcement of the Hayes-Laffey engagement in 1928 was the starting gun that brought Dave Nussbaum, young actor, racing to Boston from Chicago in an attempt to break up the match.

Nussbaum displayed a wedding ring, engraved: "From Gertrude to Dave," and told a story of $20 telephone calls, paid for by the burlesque queen, so she might hear his voice over the long-distance wire between Boston and Chicago.

He brought suit against Laffey for $50,000, charging alienation, and in turn, for statements attributed to him in the newspapers, was tried in Suffolk Superior Court, where he testified he lived with Miss Hayes in Washington and New York.

LINDY THREAT TO QUIT

New York, April 23 Universal—Despite vehement denials by Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., officials that anything "unusual" had occurred at the all-day meeting with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh last Friday, Universal Service exclusively learned today that Lindbergh had threatened to quit as technical chairman of the company unless operation of the lines was started soon.

Plainly angered at repeated delays in obtaining equipment, Lindbergh is reported to have told the directors at the meeting:

"Unless Tommy Lanphier is given a free hand to get the line in operation at an early day you can have my resignation. You can have his, too, for he instructed me to act as I saw fit."

After being assured his advice would be followed, Lindbergh plunged into the work confronting the directors.

$325,000 Calcutta Race Winner in U. S. on Pleasure Trip

New York, April 23 (AP)—Charles Murray, 37, a marine engineer of Bombay, India, who last year won $255,000 on the Calcutta sweepstakes, arrived today on the Anchor liner Californian—not as a member of the crew, but as a passenger on a pleasure trip.

He was accompanied by his brother, Bernard, 31, also a marine engineer, and the Rev. Bernard McGuire, who was the family priest when the Murrays were boys in Ireland. They will visit Detroit and Chicago and continue to the West coast.

Army Flier Racing by Airplane to Bedside of His Dying Sister

White hands quiet against a white sheet, and an army plane roaring eastward in a race with death.

Five years ago, Cecile Michaud, who was 12, kissed her big brother, "Pat," goodby. Pat was in the army. No telling when he'd behome.

Five years ago—and Pat Michaud is "coming home" today for the first time. Coming home to see his "kid sister" before she dies in the Michaud home at Sanford, Me.

In an army pursuit plane from McCook Field, Dayton, O., Pat Michaud, U. S. A., took off today for Washington, D. C., on the first leg of the long flight home to Sanford, where Cecile, now 17, holds fast to what is left of life in a grim determination to kiss Pat goodbye again. This time it is she who is going away.

The doctors know it. Her family knows it. Cecile knows it, better, perhaps, than all the rest.

"Where's Pat?"

Homeward bound in an anguish sharper than the whirring blades of the "prop" that pulls him on.

At Bolling Field, Washington, he will transfer to a plane, serviced and waiting, for the flight to Boston. At Boston airport he will refuel for the last jump home.

Pat Michaud, coming home at last. White hands against a white sheet in a little house at Sanford. And a gray blur through the skies.

LA PLACE TRIAL ON IN $80,000 SHORTAGE

Basil E. LaPlace, 31, of Newton, former manager of the auto loan department of the National Shawmut Bank, went on trial today in Federal Court before Judge Sylvester and a jury on an indictment charging misappropriation of about $80,000 of his employer's funds.

When LaPlace, whose office was in Commonwealth ave., surrendered in January, Assistant U. S. Attorney John J. Walsh, who is prosecuting him, said the defalcations would total between $100,000 and $200,000.

The defendant, well dressed and self-possessed, took an active part, through his counsel, Attorney Darien S. Terrile, in the selection of the jury, challenging seven.

His wife, who has clung to him staunchly, occupied a seat in the bar enclosure, only a short distance from the defendant. The courtroom was crowded with bank employes, who will appear as government witnesses.

ELDRIDGE COOK AGAIN TELLS OF O'HEARN

Further revelations of the intimate home life of Joseph I. Eldridge, prominent Boston broker, and his wife, Helen, were made under cross-examination today by Thomas L. Johnson, the Eldridge cook and butler.

On resuming the stand today Johnson was questioned closely concerning his testimony describing how Edmund F. O'Hearn, named by Eldridge, visited Mrs. Eldridge while under the influence of liquor.

In his direct examination Johnson, called as a witness by Eldridge, testified that he had seen O'Hearn on several occasions, once when the clubman was seated on the couch in the Eldridge home in West Newton, partaking of a repast handed to him by the butler.

Johnson said there were at one time certain letters hidden in the music cabinet of the Eldridge home and that he had advised Mrs. Eldridge to put them somewhere else or to destroy them. He said they were burned.

Falls 30 Feet, Cheats Death

Arthur King, 46 Newport st., Dorchester, may not be the luckiest man alive, but his friends are voting him the title today.

He escaped a broken neck in a 30-foot auto plunge, possible electrocution on the third rail of the Elevated tracks, and possible mangling by the wheels of an Elevated train when his car plunged through the iron fence on Columbia rd., directly opposite the Columbia station and fell 30 feet to the third rail below landing upside down.

An Elevated train had just passed—he missed that. There was a shower of sparks from the short circuit—where the car rested on the third rail—they didn't touch him. And the fact that the live rail is higher than the others kept the car from flattening him out.

CALLED THIEF; ASK DIVORCE

Fairfield, Ct., April 23—Charging a wife with theft because she took from his drug store rouge, powder and perfume without paying for it is "intolerable cruelty," declares Mrs. Gladys B. Switzer, 27, and she is preparing today to sue Luis R. Switzer, 66, wealthy Southport druggist, for divorce on these grounds.

Mrs. Switzer's trial on the theft charge preferred by her husband will come up in the courts here in a week. In the meantime the outraged wife will file her divorce suit and ask for the custody of their two children. Switzer says he will fight the suit with "every cent at his command."

Radio to Be Heard Over Phone Wires in Home by New Device

Washington, April 23 (AP)—A new field for broadcasting, using telephone and power wires running into the home instead of radio space in the ether, was outlined today for the National Academy of Sciences by Maj.-Gen. George O. Squier, retired, in describing a device called the monophone.

Without interference to regular telephone service or change of equipment, he said in his paper, the monophone will permit the selection of one of three programs available on the wires by "simply throwing a switch or pressing a button."

ELIMINATES STATIC.

"There is no tuning required," he said. "Volume control is provided, static is eliminated, as well as the phenomena of fading. There is no heterodyne effects, seasonal changes, or day and night variations, which are inherent in space-radio.

"Television and sound moving pictures in the home, which are still in the laboratory, will find technical advantages in this particular form of wired-radio circuit."

Broadcasting in this new channel, since all space for ordinary radio service has been assigned to stations, may develop in vast fields never before possible, he suggested.

BENEFITS EDUCATION.

Education was especially emphasized as becoming a beneficiary. The best minds from the state universities, colleges and government departments, he said, may be added to the teaching staffs of high schools through the development and perfection of such chain broadcasting.

"A new era lies ahead," he predicted, "in which we will have a super-university which will be the greatest educational and cultural institution in all history. Radio is the new agency by which, alone, this is possible."

BURLESQUE QUEEN AND HUBBY PART

Mrs. Joseph H. Laffey, who before her elopement with Laffey, wealthy Malden widower, was Gertrude Hayes, Jr., burlesque queen. They have now reached the parting of the ways.

SEEK AIR RACE IN NEW ENGLAND

Roosevelt Field, L. I., April 23 (INS)—A new Sikorsky S-38 amphibian owned by the Pan-American Petroleum Transport Company took off today with officials of that company for a six-day tour of the New England states to select a site for the Pan-American company's proposed aviation base.

The first stop will be Portland, Me. From there they will fly to Boston, Providence, Springfield, Hartford and New Haven, returning to Roosevelt Field late Saturday afternoon.

The Sikorsky was piloted by C. D. Kirkeby, who had as co-pilots W. B. Purdy and J. J. Maloney. The passengers included G. C. Stein, sales manager of the Mexican Petroleum Corporation, New England subsidiary of the Pan-American Company.

WARNS SHIPS OF ICEBERGS

New York, April 23 (AP)—With the arrival today of the Red Star liner Fenniand, a day late because of ice floes off the Grand Banks, warning went forth to ships sailing the North Atlantic to beware of icebergs, although there is usually no danger from them until a month later than now.

The Fenniand was in no danger at any time, her captain said, but a huge ice floe which she encountered off the Grand Banks near Halifax Thursday night slowed her down considerably.

The captain said he saw enormous icebergs in that locality—hundreds of miles south of where they are supposed to be at this time of the year.

Church in Canada Warns Against Divorce Evil

Toronto, Ont., April 23 (AP)—The Church of England in Canada, through the house of bishops, today issued to the clergy this pronouncement against divorce:

"The breaking up of families by divorce and the increase of the grounds and of facilities for divorce, do constitute a moral peril. We dare not look upon this thing with light-hearted unconcern, or pass it by with a flippant cynical jest.

"History tells us it is not an evidence, as some are urging, of progress working out toward self-development and greater freedom of the individual.

"The New Testament tells us that it is not according to the mind of Christ. It must be looked upon as nothing short of a menace threatening the stability of our modern civilization."

A possibility that Boston Navy Yard would receive the contract for construction of one of the new cruisers planned by the department was seen today following a visit here by Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams.

Following a two-hour tour of inspection of the yard in Charlestown it was announced by Rear-Admiral Andrews, commandant, that the Navy Secretary "expressed himself as being somewhat reassured as to the possibility of building a new cruiser at the Boston yard."

Following a tour of the yard, during which Secretary Adams went aboard the Constitution, Admiral Andrews said:

"Mr. Adams found what had already been presented to the department, that the extension of the buildings, ways and improvement of shop facilities would require a fairly large sum of money, also that there was insufficient space for the laying out of the structural work in the vicinity of the ways themselves and that the structural shop was not as up-to-date as it should be for the building of a modern cruiser.

"Fortunately, the yard authorities have recently thought of a better alternative for building a new cruiser, using No. 2 drydock, which is about 100 feet longer than one of two cruisers to be built.

"He stated this phase of the matter would receive his serious consideration after consultation with technical officials in the Navy Department."

HOUSE AGAINST SENATE, AND WITH HOOVER

Washington, April 23 (INS)—President Hoover today received fresh support in his fight against the debenture plan of farm relief when House leaders declared they would kill any debenture plan the Senate approved.

Having been relieved of the embarrassment of the long fight over the $500,000,000 equalization fee bill, the House backers of the $500,000,00 federal farm board bill display no considerable resentment over Senate agricultural committee action in voting to include the debenture plan in its measure.

The situation threatened to revive the enmity between the two Houses, which became pronounced during the last regular session that congressional leaders were forced to make appeals to members to temporize their remarks.

"I only know of three members who favor the debenture plan," said Representative Haugen (R.), Iowa, chairman of the House committee.

"If the Senate passes the debenture plan we will kill it in conference," asserted Representative Aswell (D.), Louisiana.

Meantime administration leaders in the Senate were attempting to rally votes against the debenture plan.

STOLE AUTO OF RIVAL IN LOVE

Arraigned in Concord Court today, John Frazer, 28, of Boston, said in his own defense that he took an automobile because its owner, George H. Robertson of Garrison st., Brookline, had taken his girl.

Frazer was arrested by Officers Rycroft and Lime of the Lexington police on Woburn st., Lexington, following a mile chase. He pleaded guilty to larceny of the automobile, operating under the influence of liquor and operating without a license.

Rubbish Cans Dolled Up

John Peck got an early start on his spring cleaning, for despite the northeast drizzle he had a corps of painters dolling up the 100 rubbish cans which he maintains on street corners for the benefit of those who wish to unload waste paper, peanut shells and apple cores.

The permits of the Spotless Streets Corporation, of which he is president, do not expire until December 17, and then he expects to have them renewed for another year. While he is forced to pay the city $10 for each permit, making $1000 a year, he gets that and more from the cigar manufacturers and other advertisers.

Icy Road Kills a Lawrence Man

Ice on the road in Reading early today caused two accidents, in which one man was killed and two others escaped injury.

Alfro Turrisi, 18, of Haverhill st., Lawrence, was fatally injured when the truck in which he was riding skidded and crashed into a tree. Dominic Turrisi, also of Lawrence, a cousin, driver, was arrested on a technical charge of manslaughter.

James G. Rackley, living at the Boston Y. M. C. A., escaped injury on the same stretch of road when his car skidded into a shallow pond.

Augusta, Me., April 23—A general alarm fire today swept the top floor of a four-story brick structure owned by the Augusta Real Estate Association, causing damage estimated at $50,000.

FORD FOREIGN STOCK 'BAIT' IS PROBED

New York, April 23 (AP)—Offerings of stocks of foreign subsidiaries of the Ford Motor Co and in aviation companies are being investigated by the states attorney-general's office.

Watson Washburn, deputy attorney-general in charge of the bureau of securities, said about 20 firms offering Ford stock were under investigation. Some of them, he said, after accepting deposits, have apparently made no effort to deliver the stock and have been found to be backed by men with unsavory reputations.

While no cases have been found where depositors have been unable to obtain return of their deposits, he declared it an old dodge to use good stocks as a bait to entice investment in doubtful stocks.

Women Plan to Keep Dry Law in Wisconsin

Chicago, April 23 (AP)—The Women's Christian Temperance Union announced today that it would campaign to restore the Wisconsin Prohibition law if it is repealed by the State Legislature at the present session.

5000 ESCAPE RAGING FLOOD IN ARKANSAS

Snowlake, Ark., April 23 (AP)—More than 5000 persons in Phillips and Desha counties were homeless today and at least 14,000 acres of rich farming lands were inundated, the result of a break in the Laconia circle levee and high water around the main Mississippi river levee at Knowlton's Landing.

High water from the White river which had been banked against the dyke for several weeks, forced a gap in the levee more than 200 feet wide. Residents fled after receiving warning. No loss of life was reported. All livestock was saved.

The refugees have been housed in box cars and on a string of flat cars belonging to the Missouri Pacific Railroad. For several days the railroad has kept a train near Snowlake for such an emergency.

Stalker to Share 'Jones Law Fame'

Washington, April 23 (INS)—Representative Gale H. Stalker (R.), New York, today expressed a willingness to share the limelight of authorship of the Jones bill, which provides a maximum sentence for first prohibition law violations of $10,000 fine and five years in prison.

Senator Wesley L. Jones (R.), Washington, who sponsored the bill in the Senate, has disclosed a desire to have it called the Jones-Stalker act instead of simply the Jones law.

"I have no objection to the measure being called the Jones-Stalker act," Stalker said. "I have no pride of authorship, but I have pride in the bill and I recognize it as my child."

Wife Spurns Him at Bier of Friend; Ends His Life

Chicago, April 23 (AP)—John Wildman and Bessie, his estranged wife, knelt beside the bier of a mutual friend. Only when Wildman had finished his silent prayer did he realize that the wife, who had left him three months ago, was kneeling at his side.

In Mrs. Wildman's arms was their boy, Robert. He moved as though to caress the child. Mrs. Wildman arose quickly and left the room.

Some men walking through an alley a little later stumbled over a rifle. Then they came to a man's body—John Wildman's body.

Baby Robert's birth certificate was gripped in dead fingers. Upon it, in the shaky handwriting of John Wildman, was written:

"This is all I have."

NOTED DOCTOR PLANS HIS OWN AUTOPSY

Washington, April 23 (AP)—Because he desired that his labors in the medical field should not end with his death, the body of Dr. Daniel Smith Lamb, 86, veteran curator of the army medical museum, was subjected to an autopsy today under the direction of his friend, Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of anthropology of the National Museum.

Dr. Lamb's instructions for the post mortem, which he hoped would reveal new secrets to his profession, suggested that Dr. Hrdlicka perform the autopsy, but the noted anthropologist refused because "Dr. Lamb was too dear to me," so Maj. G. R. Callendar of the army medical corps operated.

Dr. Lamb had performed nearly 1500 autopsies, including those upon President Garfield and his assassin, Guiteau, and he left minute instructions to guide the dissection of his own body.

He prescribed the formula in which he thought his brain could best be preserved, directed that it be added to the Wilder collection at Cornell University, and carefully annotated facts of his life which he believed might be helpful, including a sore throat in childhood, a fall on his head at 12 and six cases of pneumonia, the last of which proved fatal.

"I have been fond of music, reading and literary work," he concluded. "Poor in mathematics. Not much given to sports. Have not used tobacco, alcoholic liquors or narcotics."

GIRL FLIER HOPS OFF FOR RECORD

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., April 23 (AP)—Seeking a new solo endurance flight record for women, Miss Elinor Smith, 17-year-old flier, took the air in a cabin monoplane at 11:40:44 o'clock this morning.

The record is now held by Miss Louise McPhetridge of California, 22 hours 3 minutes and 12 seconds.

Miss Smith's plane carried 209½ gallons of gasoline, enough for 30 hours under normal conditions. Officials said that was the first time a woman flier had used a "real man's ship," with such a heavy load, for an attempt of this kind.

P. O. INSPECTOR SHOT IN FIGHT

Chicago, April 23 (AP)—Evan Jackson, an ace among Chicago postal inspectors, and four men he sought for an $18,000 post-office robbery, fought with guns in a room at the Hawthorne Arms Hotel early today.

Jackson was shot three times and may die. Clyde Mackin, one of the robber suspects, was slightly wounded and was captured. A woman companion of the four men, Marian Courtney, leaped from a first floor window and was found, painfully hurt, on the alley pavement below. The other three escaped.

Emperor Inspects Rebuilt Yokohama

Yokohama, Japan, April 23 (AP)—The Emperor of Japan, breaking his habitual seclusion, today attended Yokohama's celebration of the completion of its five and one-half year program of reconstruction since the disastrous earthquake on September 1, 1923, when not a single building remained standing.

Today he found an entirely remade city laid out on modern lines with wide-paved avenues, new parks, rebuilt bridges, scores of large ferro-concrete buildings, scores of thousands of new homes and shipping facilities fully restored. Yokohama now has a population of more than 500,000 which is greater than it was before the earthquake.

SPENCE SCHOOL ALUMNAE BOOM MILLION FUND FOR ALMA MATER

Meet at Chilton Club and Discuss Plan for Raising Endowment

HOW FAR THE LITTLE CANDLES ON CHILTON CLUB tables throw their beams—how mellowing is their appeal when million-dollar drives are in the air. For 22 Spence school alumnae they pointed cheery little paths of service while plans for promoting a drive for funds for their alma mater were discussed around the festive board of Mrs. Frederick Ayer. Miss Charlotte S. Baker of the Spence school faculty came over from New York to elaborate plans for carrying on the local campaign, which is in charge of Mrs. Ayer.

FROM PROVIDENCE CAME MRS. ASHBELL WALL with four interested friends and, from Salem, Mrs. Warner Day. It was a real "reunion dinner" for many, including Mrs. Russell Burrage, Mrs. Richard Russell and Mrs. Andrew Weeks Anthony, and great should be the rejoicing in the bursar's office when these devotees make their reports.

FOR MRS. AYER, BE IT KNOWN, HAS A WAY OF keeping everyone wide awake and interested in this campaign merely by making them happy. And, of course, this particular drive, of nationwide scope, must be promoted along the lines of least resistance and no one yet has been otherwise than cheery under her guidance.

EVERY DAY THE LIST OF PATRONESSES FOR THE gala opening night of "Cherry Orchard" grows longer and more impressive. It needs only a glimpse of the seating chart of the Hollis St. Theater to set pencils to underscoring May 6 as a red letter date for society, for virtually everyone will be there. Not since grand opera packed the elite en masse in one spot has such a gathering of notables flocked to any attraction. Mrs. Morton P. Prince is in charge of the patroness list.

MRS. ALBERT BURRAGE, JR., MISS MARY CURTIS Mrs. Frederick S. Whitwell, Mr. and Mrs. George Brainwell Baker, Mr. George E. Clement, Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Harris, Mrs. James H. Means, Mr. and Mrs. William G. Perry, Mrs. George Atherton, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence P. Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. Richard M. Everett, Miss Penelope Noyes, have just been added to the list.

STILL OTHERS WHO ARE DRAWN PARTLY BY EVA LE GALLIENE'S Civic Repertory offering with Nazimova in the stellar role, and partly by a desire to help benefit the Church Home Society are Dr. and Mrs. William H. Dewart and Dr. and Mrs. Joel Goldthwait. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gray Dodge and Mr. and Mrs. George S. Winslow, Mrs. Bertram W. B. Greene, Dudley R. Howe and Ernest Lovering, Jr.

SPONSOR BENEFIT PERFORMANCE

New patronesses continue to flock to the banner of the Church Home Society for the gala opening performance of Nazimova in "Cherry Orchard," at the Hollis Theater, May 6. Recently enrolled workers for the cause, beside Mrs. Burrage, include Miss Mary Curtis (center left) and Mrs. Frederick S. Whitwell (center right). Mrs. Morton P. Prince (extreme right) is in charge of the list. (Staff photos.)

NOTWITHSTANDING THE CHARM OF NEW ORLEANS THE BOSTON delegates to the National Junior League conference there are prepared to resist it. And to make doubly sure that Southern hostess belles may not lure them from the serious business of discussing social problems presented by representatives of 100 Junior Leagues throughout the United States and Canada, Miss Helen C. Moseley, Miss Dorothy Lawrence and Miss Helen Jackson are not even taking party frocks along.

THEY ARE LEAVING NEW YORK SUNDAY, ACCOMPANIED BY Mrs. Lyon Weyburn, regional director for the New England States and Canada, and anticipate three days' "hard work" at the convention, with no time off for play. Miss Moseley declares. Miss Moseley, by the way, has earned a reputation for Junior League work which will be remembered when the nominating committee makes its report at the annual meeting for the election of officers the middle of May.

PAINTING WORD PICTURES COMES NATURALLY TO MRS. JOSEPH LINDON SMITH, daughter of Maj. George Haven Putnam, head of the famous publishing house in New York, and never did her former classmates at Bryn Mawr realize it more than when she told them informally of the "Erypt of Today" at the reception given in her honor at the Bryn Mawr Club by Mrs. Robert E. Belknap last evening. Having studied Arabic, and people, Mrs. Smith is unusually interesting in recounting her experiences in that historic land.

Mrs. Frederick Ayer Is an Enthusiastic Leader in the Campaign

MRS. BELKNAP WAS ASSISTED IN RECEIVING BY MRS. SMITH and Mrs. Richard Y. Fitzgerald, president of the Bryn Mawr Club. And reminiscent of college days, former classmates, which included Mrs. Spencer Borden, presented the guests. Mrs. Thorndike D. Howe and Mrs. Marshall Fabyan shared hostess duties with Mrs. Belknap.

ONE MAY SIP TEA AT MRS. RUDOLPH WELD'S WARREN ST. studio in Brookline and be stimulated not alone by the fragrant beverage but by the new "art of seeing," quite the simplest method of fathoming the psychology of the creative artist. Cultivating the seeing talent becomes a delightful experiment when the ideas of Charles H. Woodbury, the painter, are so clearly shown in the exhibit from the Woodbury Training School of Applied Observation.

LEST ANYONE MISTAKE THIS FOR AN ART SCHOOL, LET ME whisper here that it is far from that, though its president, Homer St. Gordon, hails from the Philadelphia Carnegie Art Institute. Mrs. Charles Bruce Perkins, Mrs. T. Russell Sullivan, Mrs. Henry Tudor, Mrs. Barrett Wendell and Mrs. Weld are directors and Stuart Montgomery secretary.

WITH THE YACHTING SEASON JUST AROUND THE CORNER, agitation for the abolition of Sunday races this year is causing no little stir among Marblehead enthusiasts. The no small matter of continual noise may yet decide this matter in favor of the tired business man and the sleeping youngsters and influence the choice of many for this resort for the summer.

THE GEORGE W. BAILEYS OF WESTON HAVE ALREADY planned to spend a part of the summer there with Mr. Bailey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Briggs Bailey of Boston. This is the annual delight of the younger Baileys, Mary Alice, George William and little Richard Briggs Bailey, who never tire of watching the gleaming racing boats from "Tide Top," their grandparents' charming retreat.

FRANCE AND SPAIN BECKON TO MRS. HENRY PRATT McKEAN of Beverly Farms and her sister, Mrs. Arthur Adams (Margery Lee Sargent), of Dover, who are now visiting their sister, Mrs. H. B. R. Gray-Edwards, in London. The return to summer pleasures here may be deferred for several weeks yet.

SAILING ABROAD THIS MONTH WILL BE MR. AND MRS. HENRY S GREW, with Constantinople as their first objective. A visit to Mr. Grew's brother, Ambassador Joseph C. Grew, and Mrs. Grew will precede a journey to Paris, where they will join their daughter, Miss Ethel Grew, who has been in school there the past winter and who will accompany her parents to West Manchester to spend the summer. The travel chronicle records the visit of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Spaulding and Mrs. Quincy Adams Shaw at the Ambassador in New York, together with the register of Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Hutchins.

NAVY TO MAKE FLYING SAFER

Washington, April 23 (AP)—A report sent to the Senate by Secretary Adams shows that fatalities in the aviation service of the navy and marine corps in the last five years have totaled 150, and that their outstanding cause has been the tail spin.

"While progress has been made," the report says, "the problem has not been solved. The most promising development is the Handley-Page slotted wing, which has undergone modification and development by the navy."

Says Willis J. Abbot Spoke Only for Self

The following letter has been sent out by Clifford P. Smith, committee on publication of the First Church of Christ, Scientist:

To the Editor of the Boston American:

There appears to be a possibility that readers of the Boston American may believe that Willis J. Abbot represented The Christian Science Monitor when, at a meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, in Washington, last week, he proposed an investigation of the alleged control of newspapers by the International Paper Co. Therefore, I am writing to say that Mr. Abbot spoke only for himself in his capacity as a member of the American Society of Newspaper Editors and without having consulted the board which is responsible for The Christian Science Monitor's editorial policy. This board has taken no position with regard to the subject in question.

Sincerely yours,
CLIFFORD P. SMITH.

Curiosity Big Asset, Prof. Sharp Tells Youthful Writers

SUCCESS for the young writer depends upon an unlimited amount of patience, Prof. Dallas Lore Sharp, formerly of Boston University, told the members and guests of the Boston Branch of the National League of the American Pen Women at their "Celebrity Breakfast" at the Hotel Statler.

He related in detail his recent trip to the Panama jungles and stressed, symbolically, the essentials of successful writing.

Introduced by Mrs. Nelson W. Howard, president of the chapter, Prof. Sharp outlined the requisites of "Creative Writing." Inquisitiveness was one of the important things.

"To be blessed with curiosity," he said, "and to combine it with literary ability results in accurate fiction. There is no sort of literary economy. There is no limit to the mind. The mind doesn't get old as the body does. The literary man can be born again even if he is old."

(Staff Photo)

Mrs. Nelson W. Howard

Prof. Sharp left the College of Liberal Arts several years ago to devote his time exclusively to writing, his forte being the out of doors and nature's secrets.

Greetings from the Commonwealth were brought by Mrs. Esther Andrews of the Governor's Council, who assured them of Governor Allen's best wishes in their undertakings, and asked for their support in aiding him to make the State a great State of good citizens.

DEFENDS COAST GUARD SEARCH

Washington, April 23 (INS)—Coast guard vessels have a full right to stop and search American ships anywhere on the high seas or in the territorial waters of the United States, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Seymour Lowman said today.

This statement was made in connection with the incident in which the coast guard cutter Seneca stopped the steam collier T. A. D. Jones about 50 miles off the New Jersey coast, firing several warning shots.

No protest has been received so far from the owners of the collier nor has a report been obtained from officers of the Seneca.

Boy in Byrd Party Home on Leave, Town's Hero

Middleboro, April 23 (AP)—Ralph B. Benson, 17-year-old member of the Byrd South Polar expedition, was home today, basking in the warm sunshine of hero worship.

Small boys, their eyes agog, surrounded Benson's home. When he walked abroad they dogged his footsteps and they gazed with awe and respect at the hand Benson broke when he was swept by a giant comber from the bridge of the Eleanor Bolling. Byrd supply ship, to the deck. Through Benson's eyes they saw the great ice barrier and the gulls circling about distant harbors.

Benson's persistence won him a place in the Byrd expedition. He was refused a berth at New York, but made his way to Norfolk, and when one of the crew quit he got the place.

Benson found life in the polar latitudes much to his liking for he gained 25 pounds. He is home on leave and returns to the expedition in October.

"The man who shot my father was on that stage that arrived a few minutes after you picked me up," he told Chief Roberts. "I thought perhaps I'd get a chance to meet him."

Young Tilgham is serving a sentence for attempted robbery of a bank.

The elder Tilgham was killed in an altercation with Lynn. It was the first time he had been [illegible] as gun play.

Gay Adventure Awaits You In This Distinguished Shoe Salon

Once in a blue moon we discover in our very midst that which even the sophisticates term—"something different."

Something refreshing — stimulating — so completely removed from all that is commonplace—that we are excited in its very presence.

This particular moon casts its rays on a new shoe salon—replete with the most beautiful footwear we have ever seen—interpreting all the gay fashion of the world's style corners—crafted ingeniously by Laird, Schober craftsmen.

Laird-Schober footwear needs no introduction. There is not a city in the world where their product is not known as a synonym for excellent workmanship, artistry of design, comfort and fit. From their very beginning they strove to attain one quality and that the highest possible. Having succeeded in doing this, they have for over sixty years rigidly maintained this high standard.

They were formerly represented in this city by The Henry H. Tuttle Company and with this firm's retirement from business, the idea was evolved to open a retail salon that would convey a progressive idea to its patrons in the presentation of fine footwear. This has been achieved and the new Laird, Schober Shoe Salon marks another step forward.

The new salon is a most fitting background for the quality of merchandise displayed therein. The most insignificant detail of decoration has received a maximum of thought. The exterior of the shop is distinguished with a marquee in entirely original design. Gorgeous copper lanterns of matching design are hung at either side.

Upon entering, the effect of the interior decorative scheme is most striking. Mauve, taupe, rose, yellow, and French blue contribute to the color combination intermingled with old ivory tones. From within one gazes through Spanish type iron doors and casements designed especially for this purpose and carrying the world-known crest of Laird-Schober and Company.

The stockrooms are entered through rich velvet draperies of old blue and antique gold shades, also bearing the Laird-Schober crest. Circassian walnut panels the walls, topped by an ivory Grecian frieze. Floor lamps with different colored marble bases, diffuse a warm, flattering glow throughout the salon. There are no benches after the fashion of the old-style shoe store. Luxuriously brocaded sofas with hand-carved walnut frames have taken the place of benches with smart little footstools to match. Except for the glassed-in niches here and there along the walls, there is no indication at first glance that this new shop is other than a delightful lounge — a smart rendez-vous for the modern woman.

The entire decorative scheme, both within and without, is due to the creative genius of Mr. E. H. Hall of the Allen-Hall Company, 423 Boylston street, interior decorators in this city for over forty years.

We like to think that within our shop—the discriminating patron will ever find that particular style of footwear which flatters her feet to the utmost. In this hospitable salon she may make her unhurried selection with the assurance that such shoes as these will never fail to distinguish her good taste.

Our New Watches

Our new watches have the charm of a bracelet and the usefulness of an accurate timepiece. The watches illustrated are two of our latest models. One is white gold mounted with gray silk cords held together at intervals with tiny white gold slides. The other is yellow gold with a beautiful bracelet of unusual design.

The woman of fashion, as well as the business woman, needs a watch every hour of the day, and the watch she wears must be in harmony with the rest of her costume.

You will find a variety of models of all types in our watch department, ranging from the strap watches for sport wear to those set with diamonds and other precious stones, fashioned for formal and evening dress. They are priced from $25 up.

How can you KNOW
ORIENTAL RUGS
are WORTH
what you pay for them?

It takes an expert to know the value of an Oriental Rug. How then can the ordinary person protect himself?

Just as he protects himself against "paste" diamonds; unsound bonds; "fool's gold" in general. By dealing only with a house of unquestioned skill; unquestioned integrity; with a business history sufficiently long to have its merchandise tested by time.

As the Oldest Rug House in America, John H. Pray & Sons Company meets the most exacting standards.

Here is a stock of Oriental Rugs of marvelous beauty—$400,000 worth of them—direct importations—chosen by experts with keen sense of color, texture and value . . . priced with the utmost economy.

Whether you intend buying only a scatter size Oriental rug—or an extra large room size—your dollars buy more beauty, more service, more satisfaction at Pray's. You eliminate risk and doubt. Which explains why for generation after generation, the knowing come to Pray's.

Why Buy Reproductions of old silver when you can buy genuine antique pieces at the same cost as modern imitations?

I have on view in my galleries a very choice selection of Old Silver, with that lovely sheen that age alone gives to silver, and each piece has all the original hall marks in good condition.

If you want these pieces reproduced it would cost you in some cases twice as much as I am asking for the genuine.

Antique silver is an investment which increases in value as the years roll along. Modern silver, should you wish to dispose of it, brings only the price it would fetch for melting purposes.

I am continually adding to my collection of antique silver.

EXPERT ON MODEL AIRCRAFT GIVES TIPS TO LINDBERGH CLUB

TONIS URGES CHILDREN BUILD PLANES AS HOBBY

EDITOR'S NOTE—An interesting article has been written for the thousands of members of the Boston American Lindbergh Club by Frank J. Tonis. Tonis is regarded as one of the foremost experts in the country on model aircraft building, and will serve as an adviser to the Boston American Lindbergh Club.

In the following article Tonis tells why children and adults should build airplanes. He also tells of how few tools are needed in this interesting procedure.

By FRANK J. TONIS
Model aircraft demonstrator and instructor, Community Service of Boston, Inc.

Model airplane building is fairly new to New England Therefore, a summary of its scope, benefits and so forth is really to be desired. This question might be asked: Why build model airplanes? The answer takes several angles. First, model airplane building is an easy way to approach the science of aeronautics. Through the models which he makes, the builder learns the principles of flight. The natural laws governing the flight or our mail and passenger planes which fly thousands of miles daily, are the same forces which cause a 12-inch model to rise into the air.

Many technical theories become amazingly clear to one who has flown models. Then, after one has become adept in building planes, it is easy to try new designs, some of which may be of practical importance to large planes. It is sure that the boys of today who are building rubber powered airplanes will supply the designers of a few years hence. This is the expressed belief of men high in the aviation world today.

Second, if one does not feel inclined toward a future in aviation model airplane building is a wonderful hobby. It is easy to start and the upkeep is not great. A few common tools as jackknife, pliers, ruler and some inexpensive materials, balsa, wood, Japanese tissue paper, ambroid cement, and one or two others are all that is needed All the materials may be secured at small expense from any one of a number of supply houses.

EASY TO LEARN

Any boy, girl, or grownup, should be able to make a good plane after a few attempts—a little patience and perseverance at first will be rewarded with hours of pleasure. The beginner can make satisfactory models and the advanced builder find an opportunity to use all the skill he possesses. Boys and men who have made poor models at first, find that with a little practice, they can make very fine models.

There is a great deal of pleasure in flying model airplanes especially those we have built ourselves. It is very fascinating to watch even the tiniest models in the air. Some models may be flown in a living room. Being very light, they run into the walls and rise against the ceiling without damage to themselves and if they are damaged they can be repaired easily.

At one contest in Boston a boy had his plane nearly wrecked.

The propeller, wing and tail assembly were all broken. However, he was able to repair it in time to get another official flight and this was for 95 seconds, giving him fourth place. This ease of repairing is a very satisfactory thing about model airplanes.

THREE CLASSES

Models may be classed as scientific, fuselage and scale. Scientific models are the simplest to build and to fly. They also give the longest flights. The object here is to make an airplane with as few parts as possible. Only the essential parts are used. For instance, the body is a single stick while the wing is a very light frame with a single covering. These planes are built for endurance. Each part is made as light as possible. It is because of this simple light construction that they fly so well.

Fuselage models are built to fly well and of which also try to resemble large planes somewhat. They are not strict reproductions of large planes however. They have wings built like those of large planes and the motor stick is inside a light body. Much ingenuity is displayed in building these models, to get them as light as possible, to fly well, and at the same time to have them strong enough to stand the shocks they are bound to get.

INDOOR FLYING BEST

Scale models are small duplicates of large ships. They are not built primarily to fly, although it is possible to construct a flying scale model. The real aim in this class is to make a small model as nearly like a large plane as possible. Some builders like this form of work better than the flying types and they have made some beautiful models.

If one has access to a large hall indoor flying offers a great deal of satisfaction. The weather is always good inside.

Planes may be adjusted to circle, loop the loop, barrel roll and do other stunts. Any good plane may be fitted with a light landing gear, and it will then take off from the floor. Of a swimming pool if available models with floats can be built to rise from the water.

Indoor models will fly out of doors on good days, but conditions must be very good. Larger, heavier models may be built expressly for out of doors. They will fly very well under favorable conditions. Flights of from two to ten minutes and more have been made often.

The rules for success in airplane model building are simple. Start building the simplest models. Then as you acquire skill and these fly well progress to the more elaborate models. Work carefully and do a good, clean job. Build several ships of each type. Never be satisfied with one. Make another, improving on the previous one. Study their flights and work to improve them. Look for chances to improve the efficiency of motor, wings, and so on. The results will surely pay.

This, in brief, covers model building for the beginner. And it is written to those who are going to BUILD MODELS. Boys, girls and grown-ups. Let us hope they will do so.

LINDY CLUB OFFERS NEW TREAT FOR MEMBERS

have built their own plane and felt the thrill of wondrous accomplishment when these rise from floor or ground and circle and volplane for all the world like the big mechanical birds of "Lindy" and other air heroes, know the full value of such a treat.

The instruction material is by an expert—Frank Tonia, instructor at the Longwood Day School and model airplane demonstrator for Community Service, Inc., of Boston.

Watch the Boston Evening American every day for further information and for the treat itself.

Daily hundreds of additional boys and girls between the ages of 8 and 14 are thrilling with realization that they are full-fledged members of the Boston Evening American Lindbergh Club, and eligible for participation in the many things it stands for.

These children, who revere the hero of the aeronautical age, are all eligible for the delightful Washington trip when the beautiful gift from the boys and girls of New England will be placed in "Lindy's" hands.

This trip is to be awarded to the 12 who compose the best letters on, "What Lindy Means to Me." These 12 will have the experience of seeing their dream of some day meeting "Lindy" face to face come true in all its glory.

"And it costs only a penny to join" is a sentence that is being repeated over and over as members everywhere urge their schoolmates and chums to join, as they tell of the silver airplane that these pennies will buy for Col. Lindbergh and as they proudly display their insignia of membership.

HONORARY MEMBER

One of the most recent indorsements of the club comes from Porter Adams, president of the National Aeronautic Association, and formerly of Boston. Adams is probably the foremost authority in the United States on aviation. He has accepted honorary membership in the club.

Here is what Adams says:

"I am happy to indorse any effort the Boston Evening American may make or any plan it may use for the fostering of aviation interest among the youth of the country.

"Those of us who are active in aviation fully appreciate that it is the younger generation upon which we must depend to protect for America the priceless heritage as the birthplace of aviation.

"I shall be very happy to accept honorary membership in the club and wish you every success with it."

Hundreds of boys and girls in the city of Boston gymnasium classes have become members of the club through the active interest taken in the organization by Mrs. Elizabeth Stearns of Roxbury.

Mrs. Stearns is an ardent admirer of Col. Lindbergh, having attended the reception given the intrepid aviator on his Boston visit. She feels that the Boston American Lindbergh Club fills a long felt need among the children of New England, and is of the opinion that the immediate aim of the club to present a wedding gift to the world renowned aviator and his prospective bride is a most worthy one.

LETTER ON LINDY

Having received a membership card and button, all that is necessary for a member of the club to become a candidate for the proposed visit to Washington is to write a letter containing fifty or more words on the subject, 'What Lindy Means to Me.'

On behalf of the Boston American Lindbergh Club, this group of twelve children is to present a wedding gift to Col. Lindbergh in the Nation's capital before he becomes the husband of Miss Anne Spencer Morrow, daughter of Dwight W. Morrow, U. S. Ambassador to Mexico.

The gift of the club is to be a silver replica of "The Spirit of St. Louis," in which Col. Lindbergh made his memorable flight alone from this country to France. The gift is to be called "The Spirit of New England Boys and Girls."

Children's letters will be very carefully passed upon by a board of judges composed of men and women prominent in public life and in aviation. Every child who competes will have an equal chance of winning. The letters will be divided into two groups, those written by Juniors, or children from 8 to 12 years, inclusive, and those written by the Seniors, children ranging from 13 to 18 years of age, inclusive. Six children from each division will comprise the party that is to go to Washington.

In addition to the 12 children who will go to Washington, this newspaper will also take care of 12 parents or guardians—one for each child. This group of 24 persons will be accompanied by a competent supervisor.

WILL SEE PRESIDENT

In addition to meeting Col. Lindbergh in person, shaking his hand and talking to him, the children who are selected for the Washington trip will also make a personal visit to the President of the United States. They will see the original "Spirit of St. Louis," in which the colonel made his epochal flight. This is now on display in the Smithsonian Institute. In addition, the National House of Representatives and the United States Senate will be visited while in session.

This is a club of children in the six New England States between the ages of 8 and 18 years, formed for the purpose of interesting children in aviation and particularly in the supreme aviator, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

The club has been named after him, not for the purpose of exploiting his name, but because he represents to all, whether men, women or children, those ideals to which we should aspire, and because in him is personified courage, ability and supreme modesty.

Some members of the children's club will see Col. Lindbergh. Many of them never will, but all of them by being members of the club which bears his name will feel closer to him and should receive, and it is hoped will receive, the urge to pattern themselves after him and live up to the standards which he maintains.

Col. Lindbergh is not the creator of this club. Although he is not a member (none but children are active members) it is named for him because of the inspiration his name will bring to every child who is a member of it.

Address your letters and membership coupons to Editor, Boston American Lindbergh Club, P. O. Box 185, Boston, Mass.

30 Gallons of Rum Pour Out of Gas Jet

Chicago, April 23 (AP)—For four hours two detectives searched the flat of Mrs. Leo Di Reccio for liquor, without results. Then, needing more light to continue the search, they turned on a gas jet and out of it, they told Judge Hayes, poured liquor—enough to fill a five-gallon can and 25 one-gallon cans. On the third floor they found a 50-gallon reservoir.

MEMORIZE ALL FLAG ESSAYS IN CONTEST

While the Juries of Awards are marking the papers of contestants in the grand patriotic Flag Contest, being conducted by the United States Flag Association, it would be well for the boys and girls who are participating to memorize their essays.

Every boy and girl taking part in this contest may be the winner of the grand national prize of a trip around the world.

Every boy and girl has an equal chance to win the two weeks' pilgrimage to the patriotic shrines in America as well.

Therefore the Flag Contest Editor urges that you memorize your essay. He assumes that perhaps you may have a duplicate copy, and in view of the fact that the juries are now going over your papers, keep in mind that you are a winner until the final results are known to each unit.

For the benefit of the heads of local units, the Flag Contest Editor, again calls to the attention, paragraph 16 and paragraph 17 of the rules and regulations.

Par. 16—METHOD OF MARKING. The following will govern the marking of the papers in Local Flag Contest:

(a) Answers to questions. The answers to the questions need not be marked by all the members of the Jury of Award, but the papers, especially where a large number of Contestants are involved, may be divided amongst the members of the Jury of Award for the marking of the answers to the questions.

(b) Essay. Every member of the Jury of Award shall, however, even without consultation with any other member, mark every essay both as to (1) composition and (2) manner of delivery.

(c) Selection for place. The boy Contestant receiving the highest total mark amongst the boys on (1) answers to questions, (2) composition of essay, and (3) delivery of essay will be given first place amongst the boys; the boy receiving the next to the highest total mark will be given second place, and so on. The same method of selection will be followed amongst the girls.

(d) Tie. In case of a tie, the papers of the Contestants tied will be re-marked by all the members of the Jury of Award, who will then go into consultation and the winner will be selected by majority vote.

(e) Neatness, legibility, and diction of answers. If considered necessary in order to decide the tie, neatness and legibility of the papers and the diction of the answers to the questions will be taken into consideration.

PAR 17—SELECTION OF BEST SIX PAPERS

(a) Method. As determined by the marks given (1) on the answers to the questions and (2) the composition of the essay the Jury of Award will select—

(a) The best three papers submitted by boys and the best three papers submitted by girls, in case of a Flag Contest participated in by both boys and girls.

(b) The best six papers, in case of a Flag Contest participated in by boys only or by girls only.

(b) Notifying Contestants. The Contestants whose papers have been selected will be immediately notified and instructed by the head of the Contest Unit to memorize their essays preparatory to reciting them as prescribed in Paragraph 18.

(c) Essays not to be changed. The essays that are recited must be the identical ones that were submitted and marked by the Jury of Award. In other words no change whatsoever can be made in an essay after it has been turned in by a Contestant.

To the heads of local units this phase of the contest is extremely important, and the method of marking and the selection of the best six papers should be strictly adhered to as outlined in the above paragraphs, not only for their own benefits, but for the contestants' as well.

The United States Flag Association is doing everything in their power to hasten the distribution of the "Old Glory" medals. Through an unavoidable delay in the manufacture of same, their delivery has been retarded. They are expected, however, momentarily in each of the 18 regional districts of the United States.

Watch the Boston Evening American for further details of the Flag Contest.

DR. STRATON, IN BREAKDOWN, MUST REST

New York, April 23 (AP)—Worn out by overwork, the Rev. Dr. John Roach Stratton, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, will leave for a month's rest at an Atlanta sanitarium.

Dr. Stratton said he suffered a slight paralytic stroke last Thursday and took it as a warning that it would be dangerous to continue his activities without a rest. He had consulted no physician, but would "rely upon the Lord and trust that he will comfort me in my affliction," he added.

The stroke left him at first unable to talk or to move his right side and he had to be assisted to bed. The following day, however, he was again able to be about.

Dr. Stratton said the strain of the recent presidential campaign, during which he made a number of speeches, together with activities in connection with the erection of a skyscraper church by his congregation and the development of a summer church colony at Greenwood Lake, had proved too much for him.

CHAPTER 2

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Peter Blair, down and out in New York, takes a job as chauffeur for Madelon Dillon. Sam Hoffman, Miss Dillon's rich friend, objects to Peter, but finally she and Sam leave for Atlantic City. Peter is told to use the car. Steve Howatt, an ex-convict, badly wounded, asks Peter to deliver $10,000 to a fellow prisoner, Big George Kelly, in an up-state town. Steve thinks he's dying, and wants to reward Kelly for kindness. When Peter mentions Steve's name to Kelly, the latter reviles him. Peter keeps the money and falls in love with Arline Forrest, who works in Kelly's office. He takes her motoring and expresses interest in her.

A LITTLE gasp arose in Arline Forrest's throat.

"Why, I never heard of such a thing in my life!" she said in amazement.

"I'm sorry . . ." was all he could say as the car reached her door.

Arline looked at Peter and relented.

"I was just thinking . . ." she hesitated, and then with a streak of sudden decision, she said: "If you haven't got anything to do tonight, maybe you would like to go to a dance."

"With you," Peter's voice trembled.

"No. I have an engagement myself. But I can fix it so you could come anyway."

"That's wonderful of you! Simply wonderful!" he declared.

"It's the An Fait Club. I will have your ticket at the door."

Having carefully dressed and shaved, and hidden the $10,000 in his suitcase, Peter presented himself at the An Fait Club.

Arline saw him coming, and her eyes brightened

"Oh, hello, Mr. Blair! You got here all right, didn't you?"

Peter was borne across the room, and a small blonde girl with long-lashed gray eyes detached herself from several people.

"Oh, Arline. . . ."

"Lucille . . . I want you to know . . ."

Peter found himself being introduced to Lucille West, a young, golden person with charm enough to hold any man's eyes were it not for Arline Forrest's presence.

A burst of music and Peter somehow found Lucille West in his arms.

"You might pay a little attention to your partner," she said playfully, "because you probably won't see very much of Arline. They'll be giving her an awful rush."

"Who will?"

"Oh, everybody. Wayne Carter in particular. He's her heavy suitor. Acquainted with him?"

"I'm a stranger in this town. Go on and tell me about Arline."

The other girl threw back her head and laughed, but not too pleasantly.

"Oh, Arline's one of our stars. She seems to have the habit of attracting good-looking men, all the nice men. Wayne's the best looking and the richest, but there are plenty of others. For instance, there's her boss—the man she works for—Mr Kelly. I understand he brought her here tonight."

Peter saw Arline dance with Big George Kelly.

Peter asked Arline for the next dance.

"All right," she said.

"Say—you promised the next to me, too." Wayne Carter protested.

Arline devastated him with a smile. "Don't be impolite, Wayne. Mr. Blair's a stranger. Besides, we'll make it up later."

Peter instantly decided that he didn't like Wayne Carter.

Arline soon tired of dancing and they retired to a corner.

Big George Kelly came up. "Arline, you don't belong out here with a fellow like that!"

Peter could hear the girl gasp. "Why, Mr. Kelly!"

In the indistinct light Big George Kelly glowered. "I'm talking to you," he said to Peter. "You can save yourself a lot of trouble if you beat it now."

Kelly spoke to the girl. "Arline, you don't know anything about this fellow you're with I do. You didn't know he was a professional crook, did you?"

"That's a lie!" The words came whip-like from Peter's lips

"Don't get rough, or I'll have to smear you," Kelly said coldly.

"Arline!" Peter turned toward the girl. "Arline you don't believe that . . ."

"It's . . . not possible!" Her voice choked.

"Arline, he's been in my office to make me a proposition from a fellow I used to know—a criminal, an ex-convict. This man wanted me to go in with him on a criminal deal."

Arline's voice was almost inarticulate. "I can't . . . believe it!"

"Ask him if he knows Steve Howatt."

"Of course I know Howatt," Peter replied. "But you know him better than I do. He was a pal of yours—even if the people in this town don't know it!"

"They've got his fingerprints in every state in the Union and you admit you're mixed up with him. Where did you get that big fancy car you're driving—steal it?"

"I—" Peter stopped suddenly

"Why don't you speak up and tell us where you got it?"

"Because it's none of your business."

"I'll make it my business," Kelly told him. "I took the numbers on your license plates and we'll get a wire through to the bureau in New York tomorrow that will tell us some thing more about you, if you're not out of town."

"Wait!" Peter thrust out a hand restraining the girl. "Wait, Arline—I have to square myself with you. I've got to convince you somehow that he's been lying"

"I can't believe you're bad . . ." Her voice faltered.

Kelly stared venemously at Peter. "I know you. One of these slick-haired sheiks, always on the lookout to coo some decent girl and put it over on her."

A flame of fury streaked suddenly across Peter Blair's brain, destroying all caution. His fist drove straight at the chin of Kelly.

The man reeled under the impact of the unexpected blow, his knees sinking. Peter Blair's fists swung. Big George Kelly

On Board the S S Presidente Wilson, April 23 (By radio)—The 250 members of Cardinal O'Connell's pilgrimage party to Rome were today appreciating more than ever the privilege of traveling under the guidance of leaders versed in the traditions, character, and physical aspects of the places to be visited.

With the Azores just beyond the horizon, the voyagers were entertained by graphic lectures on the islands and their history, political and theological. The Rt. Rev. Mgr Joseph McGlinchey of Lynn explained the principal points of interest and described their significance

The Cardinal's party was assured that similar lectures would be given in anticipation of all future stops. The educational series was in charge of the Rt. Rev Mgr Splaine.

The Presidente Wilson was due to arrive at Ponta -Delgrada, Azores, at noon tomorrow. The big liner was plowing today through the Gulf Stream's warm current, and the weather was too mild to require wraps, even on deck.

Rain Monday was followed by a heavy swell last night. Few of the American travelers were sick, however.

In keeping with daily custom aboard ship, shipboard masses were celebrated this morning. Other religious observances were scheduled for the afternoon. A musical program was in preparation for tonight.

MUST PULL JONES LAW TEETH

Washington, April 23 (INS)—U. S. district attorneys who fail to heed the order sent out by Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney-general, instructing them to "use discretion" in application of the Jones law, will find themselves in disfavor with the Department of Justice, and it may be a few resignations will be asked.

This was the impression thrown out at the Department of Justice today concerning the statement of Levi H. Bancroft, district attorney in Milwaukie, to the effect that the Jones law would be applicable to all liquor cases in his district, so far as he was concerned.

Fair Weather Is Promised

Solicitude of the local weather man for baseball and circus fans has secured for Boston a positive guarantee of sunny skies and comparative warmth for the next two days.

Sad to tell, however, another storm, a gathering force in New Mexico, starting point of the three northeasters which have lashed the Atlantic coast in the past two two weeks.

There is a chance that this Western menace may sweep northward and avoid the New England area but official forecasters fear it will follow the path of its three recent predecessors

The Curious Quizzer

Every day he asks a question and pictures those questioned.

THE QUESTION

Do you agree with Dr. Richard T. Cabot that the greatest danger in American life today is that of losing our individuality?

MISS MARY GEARY, 99 Newbury st., Somerville—I can't say that I agree with Dr. Cabot in his statement that there is any great danger in Americans losing their individuality. As long as there is an America we will have Americans who will astound the world with their accomplishments. Americans who will bring to this country everlasting fame. The average American is not yet completely a machine, and the day when he will be is far in the future, if it ever comes to pass.

JOHN BENJAMIN, 603 Beach st., Revere—The rank and file of American citizenry is falling in a rut of the machine age and I truly believe with Dr Cabot that the greatest danger to life in the United States is the loss of our individuality. Life in this country of ours has speeded up to such an extent, and holds promise of speeding up still more that we should what our fortune is nowadays, for everybody is so tied to the wheel that they can't look around to see what is going to happen.

MISS JANE BOZEK, Cedar st., Wellesley—To think that Americans are losing their individuality is foolish. If it is a fact, why have we such men as Lindbergh, Ford, Hoover and Rockefeller? If we are failing into the trough of "sameness" we would not be where we are today, in the vanguard of the world's affairs. America as a whole is going ahead in leaps and bounds, and surely we couldn't have made such progress if we were all acting and living or beginning to act and live alike. We still have individual troubles, joys and thrills, and we still have individual jobs to do.

JOHN McHUGH, 50 Florida st., Dorchester—Americans today are nothing more than machines or slaves. We are owned body and soul by our employers who demand the best that we can do in fall in line and strive to get our living by being "one of the crowd." I don't know what can be done to alleviate this condition, unless it would be to stop living and give up the ghost.

'SAVE $25,000 OR HIS LIFE,' IS THREAT

Detroit, April 23 (AP)—Fred Begeman of Wyandotte said to be a well by former bootlegger, was being held today for $25,000 ransom by kidnapers who have warned relatives that failure to comply with their demands will be "too bad for him."

Begeman disappeared Friday night after having gone to Wyandotte. Two extensions of time have been granted by the kidnapers and Begeman's relatives have been warned to satisfy their demand today.

Mrs Begeman received a telephone call advising her to look in the mail box and follow instructions if she ever wanted to see her husband again. She was instructed to raise the $25,000 by 9 a. m Sunday.

She attempted to comply with the kidnapers' demands, but was unable to do so. The kidnapers called again Sunday and granted an extension to Monday evening. The final extension until today, they were quoted as saying, will be the last they will grant.

STAGE SCREEN MUSIC

NEW MARY PICKFORD BORN IN "COQUETTE" TALKIE FILM

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

A new and a glorified Mary Pickford is born of her first talkie. Those that went, curious, to see the bob, and to hear their "sweetheart of the screen," came, heard, and were conquered by the art that perhaps they never suspected Our Mary had. For not only does she rise to new heights in "Coquette," as Love's State Theater, but her work makes easy a prediction that a new and more beauteous future lies ahead for her; roles requiring consummate emotional power, even greater parts than that the film tailoring of the stage play has left her in her current vehicle.

In a nutshell, Miss Pickford has suddenly grown up. She has put the Pollyanna and such definitely behind her; she now flowers forth as an actress of the first power ready for things which will write her down as a new star in a greater firmament. Wide and wondrous is her emotional range. If you have tears, as the Anthony Hope runs, prepare to shed them now. She will play upon your heart strings as upon a lute, gently, subtly, deeply, swaying you to her will, even to weeping. Try it, if only as a test of your tear glands and anarchies; you will see for yourselves.

Though heralded as a flapper, even to the bobbing, she reveals herself as beyond that part of her career. The old legend of her is laid in the dust; the "sweet girl period" is buried under a "rest in peace." It has bobbed her long enough; good riddance now. Confronted by the hurdle of her talking picture debut, and long hesitant, she has taken the jump. And how.

For all the ham stinging of poor Owen Davis' treatment of the play, Moves sings show. Miss Pickford not only does the best of her career, but she shows what she might have achieved in the legitimate theater. Her voice is equally superb. Though somewhat forced at times, probably because of the Southern drawl she tried to attain, it has tone, sincerity, ringing truth, convincing might.

Her acting in the "ole mammy's" lap, and later during the death scene in the mountain home of her lover, are to be reckoned among photoplay high spots. Our Mary is simply magnificent, emotionally.

Despite what has been done to the original play, it still has real drama, plus much real drama. It has heart appeal, as Miss Moves proved, as Miss Pickford proves. And how much better that is than sex appeal!

You will like the acting too of John Sainpolis, Mack Swain and John Loder. Frank Crane and Matt Moore are good. But Our Mary—well, the talkies can be thanked that they put her over the hurdle into coming greatness of a new kind.

On stage, there is an ample bill headed by Jack Donnelly's Revue.

Week's New Plays

PLYMOUTH — "This Thing Called Love," featuring Violet Heming, Minor Watson and Juliette Day. Smart comedy based on the infelicity of married couples. Naturally it all comes out in good order at the final curtain. To be reviewed later.

HOLLIS — "The Beggar's Opera," a play with songs. Also the first of the crook dramas, even if sat to a little intriguing music. As Frank Archer remarked: "A trifle aged but still entrancing." The play is 200 years old. To be reviewed later.

LOVELY GIRLS LURE MANY TO B. F. KEITH'S MEMORIAL

If you like to laugh or cry, or listen to catchy music or steal a bashful glance at lovely ladies lightly clad, there's hope for you this week at the B. F. Keith's Memorial Theater. Officially headed by Will Mahoney, high-stepping, jazz-singing comedian, the bill includes four other acts of well assorted big-time vaudeville, each with its own successful appeal.

Mahoney, long a Boston favorite, has lost none of his accustomed celerity of feet and tongue. His acrobatic dancing, "mammy" song parodies, and Scotch-Irish anecdotes won him opening night encores enough to send him off stage dripping puddles of honest sweat. He's the sort of veteran trouper who loves it, too. Crowding the versatile Will for headline honors on the bill is Miss Patricola, tuneful apostle of pep, rhythm, and the joy of living. Her act stopped the show last night—and she might have been singing yet except for her charitable willingness to let succeeding numbers have their chance.

Miss Patricola

Paul Yocan's dancers are the opening act, making it well worth while for connoisseurs of feminine attractiveness and grace to be on time. Several of the Yocan troupe are young women who might accurately and aesthetically be characterized as easy on the eyes. Costumes are colorful— but unobtrusive. Dance steps are novel and well executed.

Bobby Shaver, not himself little in spite of his name, has an unusually clever group of midgets. They put on a dancing, singing revue. Calla Rini and Sister, widely known concert artists for one of America's largest phonograph record firms, give a program of instrumental solos and duets.

On the screen, Reginald Denny clowns in "Clear the Decks."

EXPECT RECORD AT LOEW'S

Judging from the great number of people seeking admission, a new attendance record should be set this week at Loew's Orpheum Theater where "The Broadway Melody," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's sensational all-talking, singing and dancing film, is being presented. Bessie Love, Charles King and Anita Page are the leading entertainers.

Among the highlights of "The Broadway Melody" are: a simple little story of the "stage act" which comes from the "sticks" to capture Broadway; the love of a song-and-dance man for one of the sisters; catchy tunes which permeate the piece; a sixty-girl chorus seen in a specialty number filmed in Technicolor; other acts and scenes such as one view in a typical Broadway revue, with highly trained dancers, singers and comedians taking part.

Mitchell Guest Star at Copley

Keats went on sale today for the limited engagement of Grant Mitchell in "Andrew Takes a Wife" at the Copley Theater, which opens next Monday evening. Mitchell will appear at Cleve's popular Stuart st. playhouse as a guest star in this sparkling three-act comedy, written by William Cottrell.

The piece will be staged under the personal direction of E. E. Clive, who will also appear in the cast.

BENEFIT SHOW AT COLONIAL

The biggest theatrical performance ever presented in Boston will be staged Friday afternoon, May 3, at the Colonial Theater when the Theater Treasurers' Club of Boston will hold its fifth annual benefit. Seats are now on sale at the Colonial Theater. Each year the performance has been bigger and better, but this year with the presence of numerous theatrical stars of great fame in the city, the performance will eclipse any seen hitherto. Will Rogers, Dorothy Stone and the Tiller Girls from "Three Cheers" will head the list of stars.

Dorothy Stone

Billy House and the whole chorus from "Lucky Girl," Dorothy Gish, motion picture star now appearing in "Young Love" in her stage tour, Violet Heming, Juliette Day and Minor Watson will represent "This Thing Called Love."

George Jessel, who will be at the B. F. Keith Memorial Theater at that time, will appear, while Mitzi and more from her company, "Lovely Lady," will also be among the ranking stars to contribute their time to the theater treasurers.

Vaudeville acts from all over the city who know of the good work done by the organization will present the "top" of their specialities. Orchestras, jazz bands and other attractions will be included in the benefit performance which all of Boston is waiting for.

Vaudeville Changes

SCOLLAY—Jarvis-Harrison Co. Flagpole Love" Sawyer and Eddy, "Push 'em up"; Sharkey Bros. and Ringle; Frankel and Dunley, other acts and special ties.

KEITH-ALBEE — Harry Rogers All-Girl Show, Howard and Todd; Vera Post, Shorr Sisters; Navigators; other [illegible] and specialties.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM—Lew Wilson and Gang; Franklyn d'Amore; Jack Lane and Ethel Truesdale; Halstead and Daniels; De Toros & Co., features and specialties.

"STEP ON IT" AT GAYETY

A stream of comedy, with numerous specialties interspersed, featured the show, "Step On It," which opened at the Gayety. A fine array of stars, backed by a chorus of attractive girls, and coupled with unusual scenic effects together with songs, dances and monologues made up the show.

Allan won chief honors in his manner of displaying comedy. Midgie Gibbons, an agile soubrette, led the chorus. Her singing and dancing made a hit. They were not alone on the cast of stars, however.

Verne Dunbar, Charles Schultz, Jimmie Doss, Marjorie Vay and Eileen Reed offered their own musical comedy specialties.

Current slang proved of great usefulness and the "wise cracks" which the principals utilized were appreciated. Holub's Gayety Jazz Orchestra furnished its customary pep.

MISS GRIFFITH'S FIRST TALKIE IN BOSTON

"Saturday's Children," at the Keith-Albee Theater, now giving Boston its first hearing of Corinne Griffith's ability in speech, might have borne another title borrowed from the old Mother Goose rhyme, so far as the star is concerned

It might have been "Monday's Child," for the offspring of that day of the week is "fair of face." Or, "Tuesday's Child," for that day's daughter is "full of grace." And the child of Saturday, you will remember, must work for its living. The name of us children of Saturday is Legion—workaday lives are our portion, and out of that busy fate the playwright wove a fair story to which Miss Griffith, the exceedingly clever Marcia Harris, and others, give the breath of life in the film production.

Unfortunately, it is not an all-talking picture. Just why there are stretches of silence after the same characters have shown they are not mutes, we do not know. In this shortcoming the film suffers.

But Miss Griffith is heard, which is the major thing. She is vocally agreeable, but like Thursday's child in the rhyme, she still has "far to go." Still, she fares far better than most of her kind of the old silent drama. Many are in the condition of the seed that fell by wayside. But Miss Griffith survives, charms, proves she has a voice that will go over, and has the ambition and the ability to attain still higher things in dialogue.

Fine audiences heard and saw this film the opening day. It ought to prove a good box office attraction. It has charming humor and the work of Miss Harris and Sawyer would make it worth while. She is a woman who can pantomime—and speak. As the owner of the lodging house, she is just admirably prim and delightfully hateful.

Grant Withers has the male lead and handles himself ably. Albert Conti is more than passing good as the lure for the lady from the "straight and narrow."

On stage, a topnotch entertainment is furnished. The big feature is the Harry Rogers All-Girl Show.

CLEMMONS IN SKIT AT MET

"Bright Lights," this week's stage show at the Metropolitan Theater, boasts of a very versatile entertainer, Jimmy Clemmons, who has been featured in several of the Passing Shows, as well as the last edition of Earl Carroll's "Vanities."

Jimmy has an act all his own, that of an inebriated singing dancer, and he is stopping the shows regularly at the "Met" with his song, "I'm On My Way to Montreal."

RED SOX TACKLE YANKS AT FENWAY

MR. BOSTON By Jack Conway

"RUTH, GEHRIG, MEUSEL & CO. will attempt to stage an artillery drill at Fenway Park during the next few days," said Mr. Boston as Nick Flatley handed him a season pass for the Red Sox orchard. "Of course, I'll be out there rooting for the Carrigans, but I'll still manage to get a kick out of things when Ruth, Gehrig or Meusel busts one to the open stretches.

"When Ruth is in town, thousands of people turn out to see him knock home runs. They are disappointed when the Babe only slaps out a few doubles and triples.

"The fans go to the ball games when the Yanks are in town to see the home team win and to join in the cheering when Ruth rattles the ball off the outfield fence.

"The Babe's great personality stands out above the game itself. He gets his fun out of life smacking home runs.

"There once was a time when Ruth enjoyed making whoopee almost as much as he did hitting home runs, but those days are gone forever, if I am to believe Arthur Crowley and some of the other young men who are very close to the king of swat. At the age of 35 Ruth is a big business man in baseball. He is busy making and saving as much money as possible. He knows that he cannot continue as a player in the national pastime forever.

"At the most Ruth has only five years of big league baseball ahead of him. During this time he intends to give everything he has to the game, to keep in the best of condition, and to save a large part of his princely salary.

"BOSTON and New England fans will always look upon Ruth as one of their own heroes. It was in the Hub, as a member of the Red Sox, that Ruth first attracted attention as a home run hitter.

"The Babe is that rare type of ball player who instinctively does the right thing on the baseball field. Hughey Duffy once told me he never saw the Babe make a baseball mistake.

"Ruth was great as a pitcher. He did equally well at first base, while he now shines brilliantly in the outfield.

"He is one of the few ball players who looks good even when striking out. There is something dramatic in the way he swings at the old union.

"Stuffy McInnis once called my attention to the fact that Ruth, when making his backward swing, takes his eye off the ball. The Babe's marvelous eyesight enables him to pick the ball up as it soars between the pitcher's box and the plaster. The average ball player would never be able to connect with the agate if he didn't keep his eye on the ball at all times.

"RUTH still considers Bill Carrigan, Red Sox pilot, the greatest manager in baseball. It was Old Rough who took Ruth in hand when he came up from Baltimore. Carrigan helped to develop Babe into a star and the latter has always been grateful.

"GRATITUDE is one of the big things in Ruth's makeup. He never forgets a friend. That is why he is so popular throughout the country.

"I hope John Feeney has recovered sufficiently from his recent cold to enable him to risk watching the Babe in action. I know Feeney will get a greater thrill seeing Ruth hit a home run than he would out of winning a big law case.

"CARRIGAN has a flock of good pitchers and they are liable to cramp the style of Ruth, Gehrig and Meusel. But even with the best of hurling I have an idea Murderers' Row will bust through for a few long drives. All I ask are some Red Sox victories and two or three home runs by the Babe."

By TED LYNCH

Harvard opens its home baseball season today, facing Bates at Soldiers' Field Coach Mitchell will send Red MacHale, one of his sophomore pitchers, against the Maine aggregation.

MacHale is a right-hander and performed in creditable fashion for Claude Davidson - freshman nine a year ago.

Harvard is standing pat on its varsity team. Jim Dudley will probably start behind the plaster, but will give way to the inexperienced Sam Batchelder, if the score warrants.

The Crimson will start its varsity infield of Prior, Nugent, McGrath and Donaghy.

Tommy Gilligan, Benny Bassett, and Al Whitney will patrol in the outfield.

Harvard expects little opposition from the Maine team. The visitors were defeated by Bowdoin in their first start last week.

The Maine team lacks out door practice and is making the trip to these "sunny" climes purely as a training sojourn.

The Crimson will face Amherst here tomorrow with Eddie Colpas as the probable starting hurler. Dick Ketchum or Howie Whitmore will hurl against the hard hitting Springfield team on Saturday.

RUFFS UP CHAMPS AT FENWAY

Charley Ruffing, Red Sox mound ace, faces the world champion Yankees at Fenway today in the first appearance of the Hose in the Hub this year. Ruffing lost out in the opener in New York. The heavy hitting New York team battered his offerings. Ruffing is after revenge today.

BIG LEAGUE ICE WAR NEAR

Chicago, April 23 (AP)—Rumblings of a "hockey war" grew louder today

Announcement by Maj. Frederic McLaughlin that his Chicago Blackhawks will continue to play in the Coliseum, instead of the new Chicago stadium, opened a new flood of apparently reliable reports that Paddy Harmon, president of the Stadium, would combine with other recalcitrants and form a hockey circuit opposed to the National league.

Harmon, backed by several wealthy Chicago businessmen in the $7,000,000 stadium venture, has said he would insist on major league hockey being played next winter in his sports palace. But he has failed to buy a team in the national circuit and as the Blackhawks will play in the Coliseum, his friends today were certain he would make the next move by raiding the playing crop of major leaguers in the United States and Canada.

Although Harmon refused to reveal his plans, he said he would either buy up enough contracts to force his way into the National League or establish at least a four team league in Chicago.

Reports also were current today that a new league was to be formed by Harmon, Frank Patrick, veteran hockey magnate of Vancouver, B. C., and the Dempsey-Tunney interests of New York. Dempsey conferred with Harmon last week, while Patrick is expected to confer with him next week. Their purposes have not been revealed.

BRAVES CLASH WITH DODGERS

Brooklyn, April 23—The Boston Braves who haven't been defeated in the entire week of the young baseball season, jump on the luckless Brooklyn Dodgers again today.

The league leaders from Boston won all three times they faced the Robins over in Boston, and expect to start in here where they left off.

Bob Smith the club's great right hander was picked by Judge Fuchs to win this one and Bob's chances look bright He tossed the opening Boston game and won it, but it wasn't his fault. He was knocked all over the lot, but Brooklyn kicked the game away

The game was a warm-up for Smith and he should be in form for today's affair. Watson Clark southpaw was Bobby's selection He is in the best shape of any Dodger pitcher and as the club has lost five in a row, the chubby manager is desperate.

HAMBONE SIGNS FOR RAWSON GO

Joe Hambone Kelley, the man mauler from South Boston, will meet Big Boy Rawson, sensational knockout artist from Dorchester, in the feature bout of an all-heavyweight carnival at the Arena next Monday night.

Rawson was scheduled to box Bob Mills, New Hampshire heavyweight, in the Arena Friday night, but the farmer boy was stricken with the grippe, and will be unable to box for a few weeks Luther then cancelled the whole card. Col. Bob McKirdy signed up the mighty Hambone and postponed the show until Monday, in order to give the South Boston slugger some additions time in which to train.

SOX SEEK REVENGE IN FRAY WITH YANKS

ernor Allen, who has been in shape for a week now, will hurl out the first ball, after Managers Huggins and Carrigan have led the united athletes to the flagpole. That Coughlin band will perform before and during the pastime.

Everything is lovely for a great crowd. If the weather is right Boston fans are hungry for baseball. The Braves stunned them up, and now they are ready to work out their enthusiasm on the Red Sox.

For great things are expected of Carrigan's team this year. Bill has rebuilt his ball club, has picked up quite a bit of strength; so it seems to be up to him to perform a few miracles. Bill has done such things with Boston clubs

The Sox thus far have played three games, and lost a couple of them. But two were dropped to the Yankees, who are real champs, and trying to prove it early, as is their wont.

YANKS MEET FIGHT

The Yankees have always had their troubles winning ball games at the Fenway. The Sox like to fight them there. They will be fighting in this series, both to get in right with the natives, and to collect a little revenge for what happened in New York The fans have the spirit, so has the ball club, so everything looks lovely.

Mister Carrigan is showing three brand new regulars. He has Bobby Reeves at third base, and expects the young man to do just as good a job as Buddy Myer turned in a year ago. Bobby came in the Myer trade.

He played short for Washington last year, and had more exercise than any player in organized baseball. He was the third who had to run out when a fly was hit to the armless Goslin, and get the ball back in the game. The experts predict a real star's career for him.

Hal Ryhne, who once was a second baseman with Pittsburgh, is playing short. Hal is one of those natural infielders, and ready to go now that he's in the position he thinks belongs to him And he's a smart, clean hitter

SCARRITT IN RIGHT

Russ Scarritt, the smallest of the big league fly chasers, is parked in right field and evidently intends to stay there. He has been hitting the ball savagely, even though he is a lightweight, and the boys tell us that he's a real ball hawk.

Fleet Jack Rothrock, who has been showing the signs for a couple of years, is a regular in center and a perfect go-between for Scarritt and the always brilliant and dependable Flagstead.

Bill Regan and Phil Todt are anchored at their old infield spots, and Charlie Berry is the first-string catcher. Carrigan figures he has the correct balance of youth and experience in this mixture, and is almost willing to say that his pitching will be good

The Carrigan ambition is to get out of last place this year, and then proceed up. And bill seems to have a pretty good chance of doing that little thing

YANKS PLAY THREE

The Yankees linger around for three games, and then the Athletics come in for another trio, including Boston's first Sunday game, which will be quite an event whenever the climate condescends to let it go on.

Big Charlie Ruffing, who opened against the Yanks in New York, goes after them again in this initial tilt. He held the champs to three safeties in his bow, but the Sox couldn't help him at all

George Pipgras, one of the stars of the circuit, after quite a few years' preparation, works for Huggins, who goes after each game as if it were the crucial tilt in a world series.

The biggest scholastic baseball midweek offering of the season is on for tomorrow.

The extensive card is headed by the Suburban League games between Brookline high and Somerville at Dilboy Field, Somerville; Newton at Everett, and Cambridge Latin and Rindge, ancient Cantab rivals at Russell Field

The Brookline-Somerville game was originally billed for Brookline, but the ragged condition of the field forced the Brookline authorities to transfer the game to Somerville Repair work on the Brookline field is underway, but it is not known just when Brookline will be able to play on it.

NOONAN ON MOUND

Tommy Noonan, who hurled so well against Lawrence last Friday, although Brookline was defeated, will again be Coach Fitzgerald's mound selection to face Somerville, while Charlie Dickerman at Somerville expects to turn Hutchinson loose to fling them past Brookline.

A fine mound duel is slated in the Everett-Newton struggle, with Art DiAngelo twirling for Everett and Bill Reilley going out after two straight for Newton

Cambridge Latin battles Rindge Tech. Any time these two Cambridge rivals get together there is sure to be a lively session for the teams and fans.

Johnny Kelley, the sophomore flash who turned in a seven-inning no-hit no-run performance for Malden against Trade School recently, makes his first start on the hill for Coach Goodreau when he faces Lynn Classical.

Andy Callahan Battles Two Opponents on Friday

K. O. STAR IN IRON MAN FEAT

Al Delgardo and Unchosen Boxer to Oppose Lawrence Youth at Portland

By JACK CONWAY

ANDY CALLAHAN, Lawrence's fighting lightweight, will attempt an iron man feat at Portland Friday when he will battle two opponents in the same ring, one after the other.

Al Delgardo and some other boxer are the young men who will stand in the way of Callahan's fiery punches. Each contest is billed for six rounds.

Jack Conway

It has not yet been decided which will be first to face the Lawrence Whirlwind. Tiger Drew, scheduled as one of Callahan's opponents, was forced to withdraw. A capable substitute will take his place.

Callahan, a youth of 18, is the best looking lightweight prospect in the country. He is under the management of Johnny Buckley, who has Jack Sharkey at the head of his fistic stable.

Callahan was a sensation when in Florida with Sharkey. He tipped over heavyweights in training bouts and wrecked ordinary lightweights and welterweights. He won his bout on the Sharkey-Stribling card with a knockout and became the darling of the crowd.

CALLAHAN reminds this writer a great deal of the Mickey Walker of seven years ago. He is a rushing type of fighter, always keeps crowding his opponent and can punch with each hand. When Andy clips them right, they fade out of the picture.

The so-called lightweight leaders have been dodging Callahan. One can hardly blame them.

Callahan will show at the Boston Arena on May 13 against an opponent not yet selected. After a few indoor shots, he will be ready for the outdoor season. He should be as good an attraction as Young Kloby, another Lawrence idol, was in the days following the war.

AL LACEY, who isn't given to boasting, says Big Boy Rawson will conquer Hambone Kelley in their ten-round bout at the Arena A. C.'s show at the Boston Arena on next Monday night.

Lacey, trainer of Jack Sharkey and former handler of Red Chapman and the American Olympic team boxers, has been in charge of Rawson's conditioning since the latter's last meeting with Mills at the Arena. Al has put Big Boy through a strenuous course of training and says he will be ready to show his stuff Friday night.

Tech Asked to Row at Poughkeepsie

New York, April 23 (AP)—Whether the Poughkeepsie regatta is to have a record number of nine starters this year hinges to a great extent on whether Massachusetts Institute of Technology's varsity oarsmen can defeat Princeton on the Charles river on Saturday.

An invitation to compete against Cornell, Syracuse, Pennsylvania, Columbia, California, Navy, Washington and Wisconsin at Poughkeepsie is under consideration at M. I. T., but not definite decision is expected until it can be determined what chance the engineers have against such competition.

Some part of this question was answered on Saturday when the M. I. T. varsity outrowed a heavy Navy boatload to win by three lengths, if the engineers can follow up this triumph with another at Princeton's expense, it is regarded as probably that the athletic committee at the Cambridge school will vote favorably on sending the crew to Poughkeepsie.

The question of expense always has figured heavily in M. I. T.'s rowing calculations, since the school has no varsity football team to help foot the bill as it does at all other schools with crews. Although invited to Poughkeepsie for the last three or four years, M. I. T. officials never have felt inclined to accept since there was little hope that a good showing could be made.

But there may be a change of heart this year. Bill Haines seems to have arrived at a formidable combination, largely of sophomore material. If the engineers can beat Princeton there will remain little doubt that they have the stuff to push their way up among the leaders at Poughkeepsie.

Hartnett Throwing With Left Hand

Chicago, April 23 (AP)—Gabby Hartnett, Cub catcher, is a good baseball player and a good baseball player can't be held down. When Hartnett's arm failed to heal rapidly enough, the club physician ordered him not to throw a baseball for 10 days. Hartnett, right-hander, beat the order, however. He practises daily, but throws the sphere with his left.

Afternoon and evening blocks of 125 points each will be played every day this week. Total points will decide the match only if each player wins five blocks, otherwise total blocks will count.

Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

After trying for years to outguess the weather man, the Women's Golf Association of Boston admits defeat.

At the coming annual meeting a move will be made to open the season later than May 1.

Judging from the unseasonable golfing weather, the W. G. A. encounters every spring there is no question but that the women start their matches at least two weeks too early. Until they have played about one-half of their team matches, the women seldom are favored with a suitable day.

Monday was one of the rare occasions when the team matches were postponed because of bad weather. Usually, the women play regardless of rain or cold weather. They have time and again come into action under conditions which would keep the hardiest mea golfers in the locker building.

The three matches scheduled for Monday, Central vs. Midland at Weston, Northern-Southern at Wollaston and The Country Club at Brae Burn, will be played one week from tomorrow.

Phillips Finlay, who was a semi-finalist in the Nationals at Brae Burn last Fall, will make his initial appearance as a member of the Belmont Spring Country Club four ball team today at the Country Club.

If Clayton Geary, better known as Red, fails to be selected by Coach Fred Corcoran to represent Boston University on the links this spring, he will take a fine riding from his friends.

At Espinosa has been burning up Moortown to such an extent that he is ten under par for the rounds he has played preparing for the Ryder Cup matches. Espinosa is one of the cleverest in the business when he is on his game and if he can hold to the form he has displayed since his arrival in England through Friday and Saturday, he will boost his stock both in England and the United States.

Hoping that The Country Club veterans, Rodney Brown and Buck Whittemore, will oppose Freddie Wright and Phillips Finley there will be a sizeable gallery this afternoon at Clyde Park. Unfortunately neither Brown nor Whittemore have played any great amount of golf recently but they can be relied upon to give the Belmont lead off pair a real battle.

Charlie MacAndrews is making preparations to return to his berth at the Laconia Country Club. The popular New Hampshire layout is about ready to open its season but the summer greens will not be playable for a couple of weeks, due to the recent heavy fall of snow.

F. W. Norris will have his list of invitations for the Oyster Harbors tournament ready for the mails within a week. This invitation tournament will be staged during the week of May 23 and will consist of medal and match play events for both men and women and will also include a mixed foursome tourney played over Memorial Day.

HUSKY CAPTAIN TO BROAD JUMP IN TUFTS MEET

Not content with winning high jump honors alone for Northeastern track team, Capt. Almon Morang, Waltham, will essay the broad jump also in his team's opening spring meet with Tufts, at Huntington Field, Thursday.

Morang, only a junior, is one of the outstanding high jumpers in intercollegiate ranks. He won his first championship at the Eastern intercollegiate last spring, being runner-up in the New Englands a week later.

He didn't stop training during the summer months, but leaped 6 feet 2 inches to win his event at the Scotch games.

He came back to Northeastern this year better than ever, and in four out of seven meets has done 6 feet or better.

His started off at the fall handicap meet by leaping 6 feet. In the Y. M. C. A. meet, his first indoor start, he cleared 6 feet one-quarter inch.

Then came the Prout games, and Morang tied for first at 6 feet, 1¼ inches, his best height indoors, with Stafford, one-armed B. A. A. athlete, in the N. E. A. A. A. U. event. At the Millrose games in New York, Morang did 6 feet, but failed to place.

In the dual meet with Bates, he did only 5 feet, 8½ inches in order to permit a teammate, Jack Morley, to win.

Martha Lee Tells of Sandwich Rules

THOUGHTS of parties have bobbed up again between the rounds of spring cleaning. And parties mean sandwiches — of course. So how do you want them—sweet or sour—manly or substantial—plain or fancy? Well, it all depends on the type of entertainment. If it is a tea, why, then, the lighter and most novel sandwiches will be to the fore; there will be ribbon sandwiches and rolled ones, ones of minced olives and mayonnaise, and many other varieties cut in all manner of shapes.

Martha Lee

For the supper which follows a theater party or an evening at bridge, cheese or deviled ham or some other meat sandwich is almost always in evidence, often accompanied by a sweet one.

And picnic sandwiches—well, we all sympathize with the little boy who exclaimed that he didn't want one of these gold fish wafers—he wanted a SANDWICH!

Here is a group of sandwiches varied in make-up and with many possible uses:

HOT HAM AND CHICKEN SANDWICHES

Cream 1 c. deviled ham and ½ c. butter together and spread on a loaf of white bread before cutting ¼-inch thick. Trim crusts and place sliced chicken between each 2 slices. Arrange sandwiches on a platter and garnish liberally with cranberry jelly. Pass hot chicken gravy with the sandwiches at the table. Or arrange each sandwich on a plate, pour some gravy over it and top with jelly. Canned boneless chicken may be used instead of the sliced chicken if desired.

BANANA-PINEAPPLE SANDWICHES

Mash two bananas, add ¼ tbsp. lemon juice, ½ c. crushed, drained pineapple, 3 tbsps. honey and stir together. Add ¼ c. grated mild cheese or cream cheese, cream together and use between buttered slices of white or brown bread.

DEVILED HAM AND SALMON SANDWICHES

Mince ½ c. salmon with ½ c. deviled ham and add enough oil from the salmon to make a smooth paste. Spread on a loaf of white bread then before cutting into slices. Put each 2 slices together.

ROLLED ASPARAGUS SANDWICHES

Entirely remove crusts from all sides of a very fresh loaf of bread. Cut in thin slices, pile together and wrap tightly in a damp napkin and let stand several hours in a cool place. This softens the bread so it will roll without breaking. Then spread each slice with well-softened butter. Dip a drained stalk of tender cooked asparagus in mayonnaise, place it on the bread and roll the bread tightly around it. Fasten with a toothpick. Setting the finished pieces tightly in a napkin for a while also helps to keep them from unrolling. For party menus, the rolls can be tied with very narrow baby ribbon of the desired color.

BAKED BEAN SANDWICHES

Mash ½ c. of cold baked beans and add 2 tbsps. chili sauce, 1 tbsp. chopped capers, 2 tbsps. chopped dill pickles and salt and pepper to taste. Spread between buttered slices of brown bread.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

April Showers and Clothes

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

"APRIL showers bring May flowers"—and consternation and misery to the girl who goes out all dressed up in her new spring frocks and hats! For as surely as you put on your very newest and loveliest creation and thing's right and well it's sure to and wet feet and drooped hats and clinging gowns! Oh, it's awful! But it's Fate!

And it's a lot of other things besides! Often an April Shower, instead of being merely the nemesis for new clothes, is the Open Sesame to Romance. For when a shower starts sometimes Dan Cupid takes a hand and starts two more on the happy road to Romance.

So if the showers startle you, smile through, just as old Sol does after the rain when he comes from behind the clouds beaming and smiling his joy at once more beholding his beloved world. Smile with him and you'll see that he'll light the way to Love and Romance for you, even though the path is studded with a few April showers!

AUCTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

The World's Greatest Authority

BIDDING A TWO SUITER

Jack in combination with the Ace, and the Club 10 in combination with the King-Queen—are more than sufficient to warrant according to his bidding the value of 7 Probable Tricks at either Hearts or Clubs, whichever suit North can best support. North's jump to 7 Clubs shows 6 Probable Tricks in support of Clubs, the combined values justifying the Grand Slam bid.

The Play

West leads the Spade Queen; South (Declarer) wins with the Spade Ace in Dummy, leads the Ace and King of Diamonds and discards his losing Spade. Following this play South cross-ruffs the hand. So played he takes thirteen tricks as follow: One Spade, one Heart, one Club, and two Diamond high-card tricks; and two Spade, two Diamond and four Heart ruffs.

Another hand will appear tomorrow.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

Auction Bidding

SOUTH bids one Heart, the highest-ranking of his two suits. West bids one Spade, a bid not justified by values held but possibly warranted by his two-suited hand. North bids one No Trump and South shows his second suit by a bid of two Clubs, which secures the contract.

Contract Bidding

The Contract bidding is the same up to South's bid of two Clubs, following which North bids for a Grand Slam. Had West passed on the first round North would have made a forcing take-out bid of two No Trumps; South would then bid three Clubs, and North seven Clubs. South's plus values—the Heart a man's eyes she sees her own thoughts and emotions mirrored there; and she is always kidding herself and jollying herself and fooling herself.

Who said men were deceivers ever? They don't HAVE to be deceivers. They can just act perfectly natural—and woman will deceive herself!

'Spare Tires' Needed

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.
An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

"HE'S not my steady; he's only a spare tire!"

This rather flippant reply of the "help," when questioned teasingly by the family by whom she is employed about one of her beaux, affords food for thought. The girl who made the remark expressed herself crudely rather than with intentional flippancy, and there is shrewd good sense in her comment.

Doubly foolish is the girl who, starting a friendship or drifting into a love affair, neglects all her other friends and interests for "his" sake.

Both engagement and marriage presuppose deep, earnest, reciprocated love that is tested and true, yet even an engaged couple—and, of course, a married pair—should make themselves pleasant to outsiders and not concentrate all their thoughts on each other. Naturally, however, they are bound to each other by lifelong pledges of mutual devotion.

Friendship implies no such limitation of interest, nor should the passing infatuation, however absorbing it may seem at the time, rule out other friendships.

"Promise me you will not go with anyone but myself!" begs Bob.

This is often the first request of a young man when he fancies himself in love.

"I promise. And you're not to look at any other girl!" replies Betty, willingly enough, for she, also, is fascinated. Or it may be she promises reluctantly, remembering friends she likes almost as well as Bob.

So Betty refuses all other invitations. In time young men, finding themselves hopelessly out of the race, forget all about Betty. She no longer receives any other invitations but Bob's.

For a while this state of affairs flatters Bob immensely. But the unattainable always holds strange fascination. That is human nature. At times it is almost boring to Bob to know Betty so dependent solely on him for an escort and good times. Without being actually in love, he is sure of her. He wishes he were free to look up other girls now and then. Going to see Betty becomes a duty and kindness.

About this time along comes Babs. Babs has a "way" that is different and refreshing—all her own. Bob thinks a great deal about her and her dimples and curls. Then suddenly he realizes he is free after all to go about with Babs; not bound with any lasting tie to Betty.

Meanwhile Betty, having discouraged all other young men except Bob, is quite stranded this spring so far as good times go. Bob has dropped her for Babs; the other boys she knew, have gone their way without her.

A girl who is becoming sentimentally interested needs all her friends as never before in order to keep her sense of perspective and avoid founding all her hopes on the shaky foundation of the new flirtation, friendship or infatuation.

"I have lost all interest in other boys," Betty is likely to explain as an excuse for dropping them. But determine you will not lose interest; remain loyal to old friendships that are worthwhile. Friendly rivalry will be interesting to all young men concerned, though they may deny this fact. They also may and doubtless do take an interest in other girls. They will think more than less of you because you have many good friends and regard your friends without mawkish sentimentality.

A much-liked girl has added glamour. Then if Bob or Jack experiences a change of heart and falls in love with Babe, Blanche or Juliana, there will be loyal friends left to comfort Betty by their attentions. And what a comfort that will be!

The rule works both ways. More than likely Betty will tire first of premature "steady company" and will turn to Bud or Buel. Leave yourself free to encourage whom you will until you commit yourself definitely to an engagement of marriage.

This advice may not seem romantic, but it leads to sound and lasting romance. Keep in reserve friendships with several worthwhile young men. Divide your attentions. The girl who has a spare tire or two is not likely to prove a "flat tire!"

Wife's Meditations

By HELEN ROWLAND

WOMAN is, however, always "misunderstanding" man.

She is always either crediting him with something or blaming him for something that he never even thought of doing. Always reading some subtle meaning in his glance or his words that he never even dreamed of putting there.

She is constantly "interpreting" or misinterpreting his little ways or his careless little acts, or his most casual remarks. No wonder bachelors are so CAREFUL. And married men are so nervous!

That soulful look in a man's eyes when he gazes at you, may mean that he thinks you wonderful—or it may mean merely that he's just thought of something wonderful about HIMSELF.

That longing glance he casts your way may mean that he is longing to take you in his arms—or only that he is secretly longing for his dinner or for a cocktail or for the company to go home.

That deep, expressive sigh may be a sigh of love—or it may be only a sigh of well-being. Or a sigh of boredom.

That ring on the telephone may signify that he is dying to see you; or it may be just an afterthought which came to him when he had rung up several other girls and failed to get them.

Those flowers may be his way of "saying it" subtly and gracefully—or just a polite expression of his appreciation of your hospitality, or a bid for an invitation to your next party. Or a pretty little gesture for dramatic effect.

Woman is the weaker vessel, just stopping over with sentiment. She is always crediting a man with emotions that he never felt and intentions that he never had.

Even when he beats her, she thinks it's because he "loves her SO."

Alas, when a woman looks into

"QUITE bold," said the Junior.

"Regular doll," said the Sophomore.

"Um-huh," said the Senior, "but her mother is just one of those regular sisters to her, don't you know"

"Ugh-ugh-ugh!" groaned the three, the Sophomore, Junior and Senior making a mournful chorus out of it. So we heard all about it.

The mother is a regular sister to daughter—she's a great success at the women's club and at mothers' meetings; but, oh, what the boys think—and say!

Nice fellows, too, these particular boys; regular fellows, footballers, outdoorers, indoorers, too; if you ask me, dancers, partners, good-natured, high-spirited lads without a care in the world.

RATHER decent ideals about their own class of girls, and, oh, how they hate—h-a-t-e—and despise the sister mother.

"She's a spoil sport," said the Senior. "Our chaperon idea is all right, maybe, a bit out of date, don't you think? But still—but, oh, these middle-aged women who let daughter an excuse for a string of beautiful flirtations. No, thanks, not for me.

"They don't want to be daughter's older sister; they want daughter to be their sister, not so very much younger."

"Why, little sister's older sister taught us all the black bottom and the charleston, and she could dance them, too, but somehow we weren't all so crazy to dance them with her; but we had to, and we had to dance a lot, too, and she was jealous of dancing; on, green-eyed, daughter had to take a back seat when mother was around, and finally the girl stepped out and married a nobody, just to get away from big sister. Said she wanted her own fellows, own parties, her own new dances, and mother can't get the combination.

"WHY should she act that way," says mother; 'why we weren't mother and daughter at all, we were regular sisters—I thought she never breathed without me—and how?

"We're all sorry for mother, but we aren't asking her to any of the frat dances, just the same. I don't know whom she's teaching the new steps to just now.

"Father? Oh, father's a tired business man; plays golf, don't you know, and dines at the club. Maybe he'll dine at home now little sister and her beau are gone—I wonder."

SHOCKING, isn't it, we hear so much of the big sister talk and the big brother conversation, too, I wonder. If they always like it, these youngsters of ours, being little sister or little brother to you and to me and to the rest of us fond and doting relatives.

CHAPTER 26

QUEENIE emerged from the boudoir, her head ringing.

Into the three-room combination where the party—her party was raging and roaring, stepped the hostess. She had quite forgotten all about it. There were her guests—this was her apartment; how strange it all struck her.

While, within, the entire romantic two-acter had been played—while Eddie had burst in and had been knocked out—while Warriner had declared his love and offered, pleaded, to make her his wife—these tipsy men and women had been joshing and hushing and drinking and necking.

Stewie Worthington had toppled in his snooze against the wall on the floor, and the fall had awakened him. He was in again and up again and the life of the party again. Coatless, boozy-eyed, he was slobbering bright sayings of Broadway's children. He was the first to see Queenie.

"Well—look who's amongst us," he yelled. "If it isn't li'l ol' Queenie herself—where's Warry, eh?"

Stewie wobbled over toward her with a bleary smile on his swinish face. Queenie slapped it right off.

Worthington staggered back, holding his cheek.

"Hey—how'd you get that way?" he demanded.

"I've always been that way," she snapped. "I came from a tank out West an' may not know a whole lot about manners in this burg. But out where I was raised, men get knocked off for cracks like that, Mr. Stewie Worthington."

"Wh-why? Wha'd I shay?"

"You said enough. Now, get out——"

"Wh-what? How? Me?"

"You. This is my house. I don't want you here—sir!"

Worthington was flabbergasted. He—a Worthington—to be ordered out by a chorus girl.

"Your house!" he sneered. "Don't give me that shalami — everybody here knows whose house it is—and if it's yours, exactly how come—"

He looked significantly toward the inner room, whence Warriner had not yet emerged.

Queenie's eyes shot sparks.

"You get out of here," she cried, "or you'll find out whose house it is. You'll get the bum's rush—"

She ran to the bedroom door and opened it.

"Frank," she cried in, "Frank—I need you."

Warriner, who had been sitting on the divan, deep in thought, scrambled to his feet and ran into the room.

"What's happened, honey?" he asked solicitously. "What's wrong?"

"He insulted me," she cried, indicating Worthington.

Stewie, almost sober through the turn of events, stood blinking. He and Warriner had been cronies for years. They belonged to the same clubs and had frivoled with the same girls. They were partners in bankrolling Zanfield's "Broadway Melody"—and now—

Warriner crossed to him and whispered in his ear.

"Please go, Stewie. Queenie's very agitated over some things we discussed—and you're drunk. Let's not have any trouble."

"Who wants trouble?" blurted Stewie aloud. "I was just kidding your little playmate here, and she socked me—she slapped my face. And that isn't all—she threatened to have be thrown out after she'd ordered me out, and—and—now she calls the manly lover to act as her bouncer."

Warriner didn't want to strike him. But his hands itched.

"You must leave," said Warriner.

"All right—I'll go—it's the first time I've ever been asked to in my life—"

"Yeh—but you don't pay convert charges here," cut in one tall blonde who was enjoying the whole mix-up immensely.

"I'll go," reiterated Stewie, as some obliging friend helped him into his tux, which had been kicked about the floor merrily. "But this isn't the end of this little affair . . . not by a pretty plenty . . . . If she thinks she can do this to me — and you too, Warry — and she'll stay in the show she's crazier than I thought she was when she had the impertinence to breeze me."

"Go along, Stewie," said Warriner, trying to be as conciliatory and yet as mandatory as his mingled sentiments dictated.

"Who wants to be in that show?" cried Queenie. "I've had better offers."

"Oh—already? The show only opened tonight" giggled Stewie. "You work fast," and he looked again toward the now open door.

Warriner seized him by his fat arm and hustled him out. Worthington neither walking nor resisting.

"You're bouncing them high, wide and handsome tonight, Warry," he said, flushed with anger. "First Eddie Kerns, and now Stewart Worthington—I'll say you cover a lot of territory, Big Boy!"

Eddie Kerns!

Queenie had almost forgotten him. Where was he? What had become of him? She cast a quick, rotary panoramic glance about the rooms. Eddie was not in sight.

"He's downstairs in your—in the car," whispered Warry. "I had him fixed up a bit and told him he should wait there for you—that you'd come."

Warriner snapped his fingers and a servant ran up.

"Miss Mahoney's wrap," he ordered.

Warriner took her to the elevator. A hush had fallen over the whole gang. There was something depressing, after all, in the ejection of Stewie, who was a jovial sort and who was known to be Warriner's shadow; and there was a mysterious shadow clouding the departure of Queenie. Why was she walking out of her own new home, out on her invited guests? What did the intrusion of Eddie and the walloping knockout he suffered from Warriner have to do behind it all?

The colored orchestra hit it up on a signal, but somehow the spirit of the spree had been choked off.

A few couples danced lackadaisically. Warriner returning from the corridor, was sullen and silent.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

EDDIE KEENS, song plugger, has written the music for "The Broadway Melody," a big revue, to be produced by the famous Zanfield. For two years Eddie has been engaged to "Hank" Mahoney. She and her younger sister, Queenie, are playing in vaudeville. Eddie tells them he has managed to place them in the revue. Eddie discovers he has lost his heart to Queenie. He keeps his secret from "Hank."

"Warry" attempts to get Queenie to go out with him. Eddie tries to persuade Queenie to have nothing to do with "Warry." He is holding her in his arms when "Hank" comes in. She asks it they have been fighting, and Queenie then leaves the room. Queenie shows "Hank" a diamond bracelet "Warry" had given to her. The revue wins the approval of the first-nighters. Eddie sends a note to Queenie to meet him alone. Hank breaks with Eddie and he seeks Queenie.

"Arline . . . you don't believe him?" Peter's voice was dull.

"I never saw anything so awful . . . please go!"

"He lied."

"Go, please go. I—"

Kelly was on his feet, his face puffed and reddened by the blows. Their bodies met and locked. Kelly was struggling to get his thick fingers at Peter's throat.

Then—strong hands were tearing them apart.

George Kelly, despite the two men holding him, pushed forward.

"You know what I told you," he said, breathing heavily. "Get out of town tonight, or I'll turn you over to the police."

"Call the police—have them look up our records," Peter said heatedly. "I can stand it if you can."

"That's right," Wayne Carter interjected suddenly. "If there's anything wrong here we ought to call the police."

"Suits me," Peter declared vigorously. "Somebody get a policeman and we'll both go to the station."

Wayne Carter seemed to have taken care of the situation in behalf of the Au Fait Club.

"How about you, Mr. Kelly?"

For a moment a hated, sullen look came into Big George Kelly's cold eyes. After a brief hesitation he laughed satirically.

"You're pretty fresh aren't you Carter—putting a proposition like that to me?" he demanded. I don't need you to suggest that I need a police investigation, young man."

"I only thought — "Carter began.

"Well, don't think any more," Big George Kelly retorted, "It's not in your line. I can handle my own affairs." He faced Peter Blair again. "If you're wise, young fellow, you'll get out of here right now."

"I'm leaving the hall right now," Peter said, with a return of calmness.

Momentarily Arline Forrest had escaped his eyes, but now he saw her slowly walking away.

Peter knew small town life: knew that by tomorrow the story would be a town scandal. "I suppose I ought to clear out and get back to New York," he told himself.

Peter got his hat and went down stairs, filled with unhappy indecision.

In a shadow beside the building, he saw a slender girlish figure, waiting . . . Arline . . .

The fact was almost incredible. A surge of life, of hope, came back to Peter's breast.

"Arline . . . Where . . . How . . ."

"I slipped out the side entrance," she said. "I didn't want you to go away. . . Without seeing you again. Are you hurt?"

"Hurt!" he answered her vaguely. "No. I'm not hurt. It was so awful. I had to see you . . ."

"I don't suppose anything I can say could ever make you forgive me for starting that rough house," he said recklessly. "But I'd like to apologize to you a thousand times over. I simply lost my head—I—"

"I don't know what to do—what to say," she said brokenly.

"Will you give me a chance to convince you?" he asked breathlessly.

She looked at him unhappily, her face wistful under the strain. "Yes—if we could only get away from here—together—now——"

"Arline," he said huskily. "You're wonderful!" He hesitated. "If we could only have a good long talk tonight—if I could take you home——"

"I'll have to go back with Mr. Kelly."

"I don't like to trust you with him even for one night."

They were standing so close together that Peter could feel between their bodies an interchange of magnetism like a warm current. In her party dress she seemed so fragile . . . so infinitely precious.

"I want to talk to you," Arline said softly.

"We could get in my car and drive—"

"No. I can't slip away — everybody would notice it." Arline's voice was uncertain, yet it had a little confidential flavor. "Here's what we'll do —if you don't think I'm too awful—"

"I think you're wonderful!" Peter said vigorously.

"I'm going to ask Mr. Kelly to take me home now — I couldn't very well stay on and enjoy the dance after what's happened: It's early yet, and we'll be home by ten o'clock. I'll have him leave me right at the door—then—then—"

A great incredible enthusiasm overpowered Peter Blair.

"Wonderful! "I'll be out at your house at quarter past ten!"

The arrangement worked perfectly. Shortly after ten o'clock Arline once more beside him in the borrowed car; they were free for several hours, privately and intimately together.

"I don't know the roads around here." Peter told her, "so I'll have to leave that part to you."

"We could drive out on the Turnpike for a ways, and then turn around and come back," Arline told him.

"Now I want you to tell me what you know against Mr Kelly."

"It's unthinkable even for you to work for him," Peter told her firmly. "But what I can't get over is the way you trust yourself out here with me alone tonight. After all the things he said about me". You don't think I'm a crook, do you?"

"No."

"How long has this man been here in Millville?"

"Several years, I think."

"Do you know anything about him—personally?"

"No. I don't except that he is rather successful in the real estate business. I can hardly believe that there's anything wrong with him, but you seem to be so excited about it, Mr. Blair, that it gets me all uneasy."

Peter frowned. "I'll tell you this much. I know for a fact that he has been pretty closely connected with one dangerous character in the past. Yes—and they have been in jail together, too. I got that information from a dying man, and it might give me considerable trouble to prove it, but I'd stake my life that it's true."

It was out now. Peter, despite his earlier reluctance at confiding in Arline, had sacrificed any lingering scruples.

Arline Forrest was quite silent for some time. "Even so," she said finally, "a man might reform."

"The chances are he's head over heels in love with you—he might even try to get you to marry him. He's not even fit to walk down the street with you. That's what I want to protect you from . . ."

"I think you're the sweetest girl I ever saw in my life," Peter said, his voice slightly out of control. "Don't think I'm knocking Kelly because I'm jealous. Maybe I am jealous a little bit, but that's not the reason. It's just because I can't bear to see you . . . to see you . . ."

He scarcely dared look at her, but when he did her eyes, her head, were turned away from him, and she was perfectly silent.

Are Women Rude? Inquires Dr. Bisch

By L. E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

ONE surely does not like to think that women, by far and large, are impolite and rude, yet evidence certainly exists that at least some of them are. And even that number is far more than should be.

How often, however, does a woman thank a man when he holds a door for her? Or when he steps aside to allow her to enter an elevator ahead of him?

At Christmas time, during the shopping rush, I, myself, have observed women pushing excitedly ahead and unthinkingly cramping and squeezing children, bent on seeing Santa Claus.

Recently an acquaintance told me that, while walking on Fifth avenue, a lady dropped her hand bag immediately he stepped forward to pick it up. But instead of being pleased and thanking him, the lady in question scowled as though to intimate he had attempted to steal the purse.

This latter is undoubtedly an exceptional example. Few women could be as rude as that!

Yet women are often rude to each other.

At a bargain counter they behave with little consideration for the rights of others. They may deliberately push each other aside, or even indulge in angry words, designed to hurt.

With some women ordinary gossip is likewise often far from polite. It may actually border on the malicious. It is an undeniable fact that a bit of gossip derogatory to the character of another, particularly of another woman, spreads and enlarges much faster than talk which is praiseworthy.

To be sure, a perfectly natural antagonism exists between all women. It is the antagonism of sex.

Men are also antagonistic to each other.

But the antagonism which exists between woman and woman is more bitter than that between man and man.

Women try to outrival each other in clothes, in possessions and in gaining the love of a man. This last is the deepest motivation of all. But the strongest competition between men is in the business world and in that field they seem to play the game with less emotion and less bitterness than women do in theirs.

We like to think that women are more cultivated and refined than men.

At any rate, it should be so. For is it not the mother from whom every child, male and female, gets its first and fundamental start in life?

If a woman is rude her children are likely to grow up rude. If she is polite and constrained in her social relationships that is the best assurance for her children becoming genuine ladies and gentlemen.

And mind you rudeness in women tends to make men rude towards them.

Already one notices how few men give women seats in subways and street cars. And how seldom now does a man doff his hat when entering an elevator.

If women would keep men chivalrous they must bestir themselves in order to elicit that quality from them.

All of which shows, of course, how primitive we really are at bottom.

It doesn't take much to scratch the veneer and reveal the savage underneath, whether it be man or woman.

Elinor Glyn Says:

By ELINOR GLYN

WHAT is the difference, girls, between telling a lie to your sweetheart, or telling him one in words?

Most of you would think the latter much the most heinous offense—but in reality there is no difference—both are used to deceive and to give a false impression—you merely employ the medium of words in the one case, and action in the other, though you get over your conscience by telling it, "I never said a thing," and so you feel quite honorable!

If only people could realize that all lies dishonor the liar far more than they hurt other people, it would be a happier world.

Yesterday, as an instance, I saw a girl acting a lie about another, whom she was jealous of—smiling knowingly in acquiescence when someone said something against the girl which she knew was not true, and when I taxed her with it she indignantly protested she had never spoken!

Then I asked her what impression did she wish to convey with the smile of agreement, and she suddenly realized how mean she had been.

Now, girls, do think about this point—it is the impression you convey to your listeners, not the words you speak which matter—so pull yourselves up when you feel that you are giving a false impression, and remember you are lying quite as badly as though you used words.

When your Children Cry for It

Mothers, who take one simple precaution, are seldom worried. With a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria in the house they can do what their doctor would tell them to do, when baby is fretful, feverish, colicky, constipated or stuffed-up with cold —give him a few drops of this pure vegetable, pleasant-tasting preparation. It comforts Baby and soothes him to sleep in a jiffy. It's perfectly safe for the youngest infant. Use it freely—and as often as needed. Specialists advise. A more liberal dose is all it takes to comfort and relieve older children, when fever, sliness, bad breath, no appetite, colds, etc., show they need a good purging. The mark of genuine Castoria is the Fletcher signature on the wrapper. Look for it to avoid imitations.

EVENING AMERICAN — New York Stocks — New York Curb MARKET

$3,000,000 IN SINGLE BLOCK OF SIMMS

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, April 23—Industrial stocks were ready to resume their brilliant upward move at the sound of the opening gong today. The market got away to a flying start in a number of the low-priced favorites among the oil, copper and motor shares and close to record shares passed over the ape in the first half-hour alone.

A 300,000-share block of Simms Petroleum, representing an investment of $3,000,000, sold at $30 a share at the opening, which compares with yesterday's low price of 29¾.

A pool under the direction of "the Mike Meehan crowd," was reported operating in Simms, with market rumors promising a higher cash dividend for the stock

BIGGEST BLOCK

This is the first time a block of this size has passed through on a single transaction, though the 60 odd-share block of Studebaker, which sold last year, represented a larger investment in actual cash.

Sharp advances were the scored for the high-priced specialties in Adams Express' 15-point jump to 745 brought that stock to the highest price on record.

Union Carbide and Allied Chemical soared to new high levels and most of the airplane stocks sold higher. Consolidated Gas, at the head of the Public Utility group, was in demand above 310.

Advance Rumely was up 1¼ at 8¾. American Telephone rose 3¾ at 238¾. New Haven sold up fractionally at 99¾.

Johns-Manville jumped $6 a share.

TURN TO STEEL

Speculative interest shifted to the steel stocks when United States Steel pushed above 188 in an active market, and Bethlehem, though comparatively inactive commanded considerably

Calumet & Hecla Consolidated Co. declared a dividend of $1 a share, payable June 29 to stock of record May 31. This is at the same rate as paid in March and December, last, prior to which payments were 80 cents quarterly since June, 1926.

Electric Bond is Up on the New York Curb

New York, April 23—Prices were firm today on the New York Curb. Electric Bond & Share 62¾, up 1¼; Newmont Mining 205¾, up 1¾. Am. Sup Power A 116¾, up 1¾. Cities 113¾, off ¼.

PREDICTION ON NEW HAVEN IS 'MADE GOOD'

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Following our long-time policy of giving credit where it is due, allow us to point out that the prediction of the Public Utilities Commission of Massachusetts that New Haven would this year sell at $100 a share was "made good" yesterday. And it can be added that the Commission was by no means alone in its enthusiasm for stock of the railroad whose finances have enjoyed such a remarkable comeback under the guidance of Chairman E. G. Buckland.

Secretary of Commerce Lamont cites the building gains, evidenced by the report for the week of April 13, as the first increase for 1929 shown in contracts awarded. That is true for the country as a whole, but not for New England, where the upward trend has several times made itself evident.

There is a widespread feeling in State Street, that the Federal Reserve Board will do nothing more to hurt the market during the absence of Governor Roy A. Young on his cruise.

* * *

Dispatches from Taunton stating that the famous "herring run" would be seen no more, because the state-built "ladder" had been wrecked, appear to have been misleading. A State Street broker who visited the scene Sunday tells me the sight is this year more picturesque than ever. With state control seemingly abandoned, boys were active pulling out the fish with nets.

* * *

Speaking of Taunton, how many know it was a Taunton man who invented the famous "running electric letters" used in advertising signs, which netted him over a million dollars. He is still active in the illuminated sign business.

George Sumers, well known New York broker, now of New York, Minden, Nev., and Palm Beach, was born in Taunton. He seldom misses the "herring run" and this year is motoring to Taunton from Wall Street so his children can take in the big sight.

At a meeting of the Propeller club of Boston, at the Boston Yacht Club, H. C. Coleman, manager of marine engineering, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, told of the advance steps being taken by the marine fraternity in the conversion of coal burning freighters into fast Diesel electric cargo carrying ships.

Mr. Coleman pointed out that one of the most recent advances in the development of electric propulsion to such an extent that the propulsion of ships can now be directly controlled in the pilot house. It is no longer necessary for the pilot to send signals to the engineers, who in turn will open or close various valves or throw in levers operting clutches and gears to accomplish the maneuver desired. Complete control is in the hands of the pilot, who with a minimum of effort and time, can stop, start, or reverse the main motor, which is directly coupled with the propeller.

* * *

Following Mr. Coleman's talk the entire meeting was transferred to the Charlestown Navy Yard, where, as guests of the U. S. Shipping Board they inspected the motorship Triumph, which has been converted to the Diesel Electric drive type of propulsion. This vessel is one of the most important conversions that have been made.

* * *

The Triumph has increased its speed to 13 knots instead of 9½ knots. It is one of the fastest freighters on the seas. It has the most modern of propulsion and auxiliary equipment. Through the use of this same method of conversion, inactive ships can be transformed into economical cargo vessels good for many years of service and thus provide our Merchant Marine with equipment secon to none.

Zinc Buying

Zinc buying is moderate, and price of prime western is mainly nominal, around 6.85 cents East St. Louis.

"Pan-Am. Pete"

Another "Company Behind the Bonds" Is Studied.

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Before the U. S. Department of Commerce had collected any worthwhile data on the outlook for oil in Venezuela, we were enabled to publish the names of nearly 30 American and British companies which had joined the rush to secure holdings in that field.

Facts furnished us by Bay State investment bankers made it possible for us to print the exclusive news that a great new field was about to be opened up.

Venezuela's production of petroleum in 1921 was 1,433,000 barrels; in 1922, 2,201,000; in 1923, 4,201,000; in 1924, 9,042,000; in 1925, 19,771,000; in 1926, 37,226,019, and in 1927, 64,436,926.

One of the biggest companies profiting by Venezuelan production of petroleum is Pan-American Petroleum and Transport. Only $10,834,300 in funded debt precedes the stock. Voting control is vested in Standard Oil of Indiana, the company which saw the famous Stewart-Rockefeller battle staged at its last annual meeting.

A leading Boston and New York Stock Exchange house publishes the opinion that Pan-American has "possibilities of doubling in value in the next six months." It says: "The oil industry as a whole has a better outlook than at any time within the last five years. Regulation of output by large factors appears to have made great strides in the past few weeks. The Attorney General's refusal to approve plans was merely technical and will not change present plans, which are world-wide in scope."

Marketwise, following its acquisition by Standard Oil interests, the stock of Pan-American acted disappointingly for many holders. Lately the stock has been improving, along with the rest of the better oils.

The "A" stock is the voting issue, the "B" the non-voting. Pan-American is called "the lowest cost producer in the industry."

This is the picture of another "company behind the bonds." Any Boston Stock Exchange house should be willing to provide those interested with free descriptions of the Pan-American bonds.

As this is dictated, Pan American's bonds are quoted on the New York Stock Exchange as follows:

1929 High	Low		Prices
109⅝	102	Pan-American P. & T. 6s, '34	109⅝

5000 OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY OF PARISH

Upwards of 5000 present and former parishioners of St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, thronged the Elks' Hotel at the reunion and celebration commemorating the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of the parish.

Young and old, from every section of the country as far west as California, were present to renew old friendships and receive the greeting of Rev. Joseph F. Coppinger, L. P. P., pastor of the church.

From California came Thaddeus O'Rourke, 80, of San Bernardino. Born and brought up in the South Boston district, he came back to be greeted by scores of old friends.

DANCE CONTEST

Prominent in the gathering were Miss Bridget McCarthy and Mrs. Anne Trainor, 78-years-old twins of Dorchester. They were parishioners in St. Augustine's before the present church was built and taught in the first Sunday school classes organized there.

A feature of the evening was an Irish step dancing contest for six loving cups donated by John W. M. Wallace. The winners in the women's division were Barbara Mullen, first; Margaret Halloran, second, and Genevieve Harden, third.

In the men's contest, Michael Byron was the winner with Charles H. Buckley, second, and Cornelius Byron, third. Judges were Thomas A. Quirk, Thomas F. Ryan and Charles S. Crowley.

There was also a concert in the main ballroom followed by general dancing. Other halls in the hotel were devoted to bridge, whist and pinochle parties.

During the evening, all the representatives, senators and city councilors from the district dropped in to congratulate Father Coppinger and his corps of able assistants.

NOTABLES ATTEND

State Deputy John E. Swift and State Secretary Joseph M. Kirby of the Knights of Columbus were present as were former Lieut.-Gov. Edward P. Barry, Lieut.-Gov. William S. Youngman, Sheriff John A. Kelleher, Francis A. Campbell, clerk of the superior civil court, and former fire commissioner Theodore A. Glynn.

North American Light Income Up

Backing-and-Filling by Reserve Board Dangerous

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, April 23—Unless the Federal Reserve Board can succeed in allaying growing uneasiness over their shilly-shallying, the danger is that business and employment throughout the country will be hurt.

B. C. Forbes

The country is seriously asking whether the Federal Reserve Board members are of sufficient calibre to meet the acute unsatisfactory situation it's own weak milk-and-water action has helped to create. The conclusion is forced that there must be dissension in the board, that one faction has voted for taking a stand not specified under the law on the subject of regulating the use of credit, and that another faction has sought to keep the board within its statutory confines.

Responsible men of affairs, both in and out of banking, are voicing the unsatisfaction that the board doesn't quite understand its prescribed place in America's economic scheme and that it has only the haziest notion about what it should or should not do.

This view was also expressed to me last week by ex-Senator Owen, the main sponsor in Congress of the Federal Reserve Act. His attitude is that the Federal Reserve Board acted short-sightedly when it "brought about the collapse of 1920-1921," causing, as he declares, many billions of losses to farmers and to business; and he declares that the board is again on the wrong track when it strives to bring about excessively high rates for money. Such rates have invariably in the past, Senator Owen points out, led, first to falling quotations for stocks and then to business depression. He fears that unless the Reserve authorities cease to cause alarm, economic history will repeat itself this year.

Surely the time has come for President Hoover and Secretary Mellon to take a hand in an effort to allay the apprehension which is spreading throughout the country. In the world of finance, it is axiomatic that "anything is better than uncertainty." If the Reserve Board feels that a higher rediscount rate would be beneficial, let it announce such a rate and stop issuing its endless warnings. The daily reports and rumors from Washington threaten to cause real trouble unless the occasion for them is speedily removed. Once again disturbance was caused at the end of the week by the published reports that "The Federal Reserve Advisory Council is holding a mysterious meeting."

Should this flopping and floundering bring about only a shrinkage in stock market activity and a gradual readjustment of quotations, the consequences would not be disastrous. But the fear is growing that capitalists and others on the directorates of corporations will be influenced to delay contemplated plans involving capital expenditures and thus slow down business and restrict employment.

That is the contingency which must be guarded against above all.

The Federal Reserve law may need to be changed to bring it into harmony with the changed economic conditions in this country since the act was passed before the war. American banking of that day was quite different from American banking today. Banks then were all-powerful in money matters. The business world then was only a borrower. Investors in bonds and stocks were few in contrast with the number now.

Such has been the growth of wealth that hundreds and thousands of our business enterprises no longer depend upon banks for loans. The phenomenal fact is that non-bank lenders are supplying Wall Street with more money than all the banks in the country combined. Not only so, but the number of stockholders and bondholders in this country is now estimated at almost one for every family in the land. Stocks and bonds, therefore, have entered into American life infinitely more than was the case 15 years ago. While it may have been thoroughly sound originally to exclude all securities from the benefits of the Federal Reserve facilities, it may not be equally sound to perpetuate such a ban.

This fundamental question should not much longer be left to the tender mercies of the backing and filling of Reserve Board members. Nothing is likely to be done at the present special session of Congress, but public opinion should—and doubtless will—focus on the problem before the next regular session of the Legislature.

If, the meantime, the Reserve Board should do everything within its power to prevent trouble and avoid doing anything to precipitate trouble. Thus far it has been regrettably lacking in financial statesmanship.

* * *

Happily, the business pace has not been retarded, but continues to exhibit gratifying vigor.

P. S.—My guess is that the Germans will not kick over the traces.

'DRY' INQUIRY CLOSES SUGAR FACTORY

Decatur, Ill., April 23 (AP)—The A. E. Staley Manufacturing Company, one of the largest corn sugar producers in the United States, remains closed temporarily while officials investigate the legality of sales to parties who might utilize the sugar for liquor-making purposes.

Staley, the president, said yesterday they had decided to shut down until "we get our bearings."

The plant grinds 10,000 bushels of corn a day and provides work for about 100 men.

PLAYING "TAPER" IS GREAT FUN

When the party drags, and the guests mumble and complain, it is a good idea for the hostess to propose a game of "Taper." The hostess stands on a little platform or pedestal, in the center of the room, holding a lighted taper in her hand. Her husband selects two other gentlemen and the three hold hands facing the hostess. They then advance and retire, holding hands, and each trying as he approaches the lady to blow out the taper. This is repeated until one is successful. He then dances with the hostess, and the other gentlemen retire to the "den" to tell stories.

While Johnny travels here and there!

HOPE FOR RADIO ART IN SMALL TOWN

By FRED TOYE
Radio Editor

IS THE SMALL TOWN going to save the soul of radio? It seems to me the small town and the individual have been given too little study by the sponsors of radio programs. The powers in control visualize radio as a medium to make money. And because it is one of the most individualistic vehicles reaching for public recognition today. The person who is listening concentrates far more than when he is using his eyes. He is then himself. He is not a part of a mass. When mankind is gathered in mass, imbecility takes command. When he is by himself he is an independent thinker.

SINCERITY RESPECTED

MUCH OF THE criticism aimed at radio has been just. It has been warranted because radio offerings frequently have been childish and crude. You hear no criticism of high-grade programs, even though they may seem to be above the head of the listener. Invariably the listener respects artistic sincerity, whether it is in music drama, news or even shopping talk. But when the listener is constrained to give ear to such banalities as "Oh! Let's see now. Well, I guess that's Governer Dingle Bell of Louisihoma. Just hear the crowd yell! Sounds like he's getting a great hand!" — well, even a three-year-old experiences symptoms of mal de mer.

INDIVIDUAL VS. MASS

IT IS TIME that radio programmakers took a few trips into the small towns of the land, and get acquainted with the men and women who are running affaire there; who are sponsoring the local concert series: who come into town for the symphony and the better type of drama; who make trips to Europe or Palm Beach or Santa Barbara once a year; men and women who climb the hill-side of Harvard and Wellesley and Yale and Vassar into their home communities. The city would be a cemetery of art and inspiration without the healthy support of the individualistic suburb. The small town encourages the individual and intelligence, and is rapidly becoming the most significant element in American life. The large city encourages mediocrity and imbecility, and as a result it is losing its place in the sun.

BOSTON GIRL TO PLAY LEAD IN FILM 'FOLLIES'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service, Inc.

NEW YORK, April 22—The most beautiful girl in the world is the way Barbara Newberry is generally described. You will admit that's something to live down or up to. That's why Miss Newberry has been chosen to play the lead in "Glorifying the American Girl," the Ziegfeld film, now under about to be made by Paramount.

Let's hope Miss Newberry photographs the way she should. Beauties and slack, so many beauties come but the camera doesn't. However she may take comfort from this Everett Shinn, the noted artist, who is painting her for movie tone, declares that her features will defy the camera to do its worst.

Miss Newberry is blonde, she hails from Boston, and not only is she a beautiful girl, but to tell me a very nice one, too; and she is a Vassar College graduate. She has been picked among the Ziegfeld beauties for the last year

BUDDY ROGERS has been too busy to satisfy his yearning to see Rube Ruth play ball and to get a glimpse of Babe Ruth-way's successful plays. However when "Magnolia" is finished, B Schubert Gallivan plans to take he can take a vacation in New York, providing he returns in time to play the male lead in "Illusion," Arthur Train's novel, purchased especially for him.

LOT of nice things are happening to Buddy—for instance, pretty Nancy Carroll is to be his leading lady and he is to have a personal interview with the author, Mr. Train. E. Lloyd Sheldon, who is writing the continuity, is already in New York conferring with the author. Dorothy Arzner, Paramount's lone female director, will do the directorial honors.

SNAPSHOTS of New York gathered at random: An entire dinner party leaving the table by the seven long distance to Estelle Taylor Dempsey, Jack Dempsey the first, on the telephone . . . Ruth Chatterton hesitatingly asking Sam and Frances Goldwyn at a performance of "Journey's End," if drama, not or even shopping talk. But when the listener is constrained to give ear to such banalities as "Oh! Let's see now. Well, I guess that's Governer Dingle Bell of Louisihoma. Just hear the crowd yell! Sounds like he's getting a great hand!" — well, even a three-year-old experiences symptoms of mal de mer.

Power Trust Defies Public Opinion in Buying Papers

Anyone who thinks the public-be-damned attitude has been abandoned by great corporations should turn his eyes to New England. Here the largest electric utility organization, the International Paper & Power Company, which produces a million and three-quarters horsepower of electrical energy and serves several million New England customers, is disclosed secretly purchasing two great newspapers, the Boston Herald and the Boston Traveler.

We say it was a public-be-damned act because the power company knew that the secret purchase was bound to be known eventually. It happens that the exposure was made by the Boston Evening American.

The power company simply didn't care what the public, when finally informed, might think about it. The power company was running true to the form disclosed in the government's sensational investigation of this business, with its revelation of the slimy trail of power trust money smeared over schools, Legislatures and press.

Edmund Burke once said that you cannot indict a whole people. No more can a whole industry be indicted. There are upright public utility executives who, we suspect, share the disgust of other decent citizens at this barefaced purchase of the independent press.

Why do we not hear from them?

Does the National Electric Light Association, which is supposed to represent the whole industry, think that it is the proper business of a public utility to absorb the independent press?

We note that A. R. Graustein, president of the International Paper & Power Company, which bought the newspapers, is a member of the public policy committee of the National Electric Light Association.

Does the National Electric Light Association sanction this as sound public policy? Or does the National Electric Light Association repudiate Mr. Graustein and his works?

According to the records, A. R. Graustein sits on the public policy committee of the National Electric Light Association along with the following public utility magnates: H. F. Sands, P. S. Arkwright, John B. Miller, M. S. Sloan, W. A. Jones.

Do they stand for Graustein's "public policy"? Is it THEIR "public policy"?

How about it, gentlemen of the electric light and power industry?

Long Distance Sight

And REAL Long Distance

THE BIGGEST TELESCOPE, AND A BIGGER ONE TO COME

This picture shows what is, at present, the most powerful astronomical instrument in the world, a 100-inch reflector on Mount Wilson. The dotted line around this gigantic "eye" for looking out into space shows the comparative size of a new telescope that is to be built, infinitely greater in power.

The Mount Wilson telescope is 100 inches in diameter. The new telescope, which will cost several millions of dollars, will be 200 inches in diameter. The grinding of that enormous lens is a long, tedious, slow and uncertain process.

But of all mechanical work done by men, the grinding of such a lens is the noblest, most important, enabling tiny creatures on this earth to look out actually "millions of light years into space and the mysteries of creation."

The Mount Wilson instrument shown here reveals to the eyes of the astronomer, 1,500,000,000 stars, each star a great sun with its planets revolving around it.

It is hoped that the new astronomical "eye" will enable scientists to look into space to the inconceivable distance of 1,000,000,000 light years.

What that distance means it is utterly impossible for the mind to conceive, except as a mathematical expression.

Light travels 186,000 miles in one second, more than seven times the distance around the world, while your watch ticks once.

And one billion light years would be the distance that light, going 186,000 miles a second, could travel in one billion years.

And in that terrific distance, there are other universes outside of our own, other gigantic suns, perhaps a billion times as large as the biggest sun we know.

Size, like distance, in the universe, is beyond our comprehension.

We know that our sun is a million times as big as the earth on which we live. We can see in the range of our telescope suns that are a million times as big as our sun.

As to the outside universes of which we know nothing, it is conceivable that stars exist compared with which this earth would be like a grain of sand on the shore of the ocean.

However, weak finite creatures that we are, we can at least dimly conceive the grandeur of creation. And that is glory enough!

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

SOME corrupt paragraphs gleaned during the Government inquisition of Tex Guinan in the federal courts of this parched dynasty:

Most of the drinking in America is being done by revenue agents.

There is a sucker born every minute.

And Tex wants to be the official timekeeper for them all.

A sucker is a sap.

And all the world is Tex's maple tree.

Tex defines a sucker as a friend, Which is true until he stops being a sucker.

At Guinan's next trial, if any, the jurors will have to buy their seats from speculators.

The Government can solve the immigrant problem by allowing Tex to meet them on the wharf and educate them.

The closest living relative to a sap is a bug.

A bug is a kindly old gentleman who gets the back of his neck horribly sunburned from bending over and picking up sea shells for children.

The prosecution claimed that Tex controlled all the proxies in the industry of beauty, fascination and allurement.

The jury took a 24-eyed look at Guinan and declared her innocent.

Even Tex will admit that she is no longer a springer.

Her official status is that of matron of the town clowns.

The Government claim that Tex charmed her victims is a lot of whale oil.

Her wise-cracking in court indicated that she was doing all she could to help the Government by keeping the jury awake.

Another trial like that would force Ringling Brothers out of business.

Instead of bringing in the verdict, the foreman of the jury should stand up and say:

"Judge, have you heard this one?"

Competition is getting so keen in the cafeterias of justice that every good lawyer should learn how to sing and dance.

The prosecuting attorney should be a master of ceremonies.

And the trial should be broadcast during the Federal Glee Club Hour.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Sleep hath its own world, a boundary between the things named death and existence.—Byron.

A man without a purpose is soon down at zero. Better to have a bad purpose than no purpose at all. —Carlyle.

The happiness of a man in this life does not consist in the absence but in the mastery of his passions. —Tennyson.

All higher motives, ideals, conceptions, sentiments in a man are of no account if they do not come forward to strengthen him for the better discharge of duties which devolve upon him in the ordinary affairs of life.—Beecher.

Poverty is no disgrace to a man, but it is confoundedly inconvenient.—Smith.

General and abstract ideas are the source of the greatest of men's errors.—Rousseau.

Friendship is ever serviceable; love has at times also the property of being hurtful.—Seneca.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

THEY took Bill to the hospital last night. Complete nervous breakdown. Bankrupt too — his friends had to put up the price. Same old reason—booze.

Strange that a bright, decent fellow like Bill should deliberately wreck his life with booze. And all the laws in the country don't seem able to stop him.

Recently the U. S. Senate approved a resolution for an expenditure of $24,000,000 for one year for prohibition enforcement, this resolution being subsequently thrown out by the House.

Twenty-four millions of dollars to enforce prohibition—that's a pittance in comparison with what we have already spent, and the law isn't yet enforced.

Never in history has America been so sopping wet as it is at present. Never has it been such a menace in the home and schools. Never has open drunkenness been so socially accepted as a "good joke on Uncle Sam".

And though laws increase and appropriations accumulate, there seems to be exactly nothing we can do about it.

We've spent ten futile years in trying to keep booze from Bill—

But how about keeping Bill from booze?

How about making Bill his own law enforcement officer?

There's an angle we haven't tried. Yet it hits at the very heart of the situation.

Americans have a peculiar psychology which is molded by their environment and traditions. They grow cantankerous under pressure. You can persuade them to do things, if you'll sell them the idea—but you can seldom force them to do anything.

We've tried high pressure methods with the prohibition problem. They haven't worked. The very term "prohibition" is anathema to the average red-blooded citizen. Then how about persuasion—popular education?

Can we sell the idea of temperance to America?

If so, how?

How is any idea or any commodity sold to America?

How was the idea of Halitosis sold to America?

Did you or I know anything about Halitosis when we were youngsters, partner? Were we awake to the awful danger that we might be four times a bridesmaid-but-never-a-bride unless we used antiseptics? I'll say we weren't. But show me the Hottentot who doesn't know it now. From Cape Town to Kamchatka the horrors of Halitosis have been spread by dramatic word and picture that would carry conviction to the most reluctant. If you harbor Halitosis nowadays, you do it at your own peril.

Advertising—that's how the idea of Clean Breath was sold to America. That's how every worth while idea has been sold to America. By constant hammering through the public press, by making it a popular issue, a part of the accepted social code.

Ask Mr. Ford how to sell an idea to America. Ask the gentlemen who popularized Eastman's Kodak, Heinz's 57 Varieties, Yeast, Ivory Soap, Campbell's Soups, Lucky Strike Cigarettes, Hind's Cold Creams.

They knew how. I'll wager they'd know how to put temperance across. Queen Marie's autographed warning as to the effects of dollar gin on girlish waist lines would do more to eliminate flapper drinking than a congressional appropriation of billions.

Advertise temperance. Stop making it a moral issue. Put it up to the American people as a matter of personal hygiene, personal economics—personal pride.

Sell the idea of temperance to the country as we sold the idea of the war, as we sold Liberty Bonds—by advertising—

Make congressional appropriations for a form of education which will really mold public opinion rather than enforcement which doesn't enforce.

Make tippling as bad form as Halitosis or pimples or a vacation trip without a camera—through the same medium. Then you'll be using a method which the American people understand, respect and will accept.

THE HEARST PAPERS DEMAND FOR AMERICA

SCHOOLS—MORE SCHOOLS, BETTER SCHOOLS, more ADEQUATE and more MODERN school buildings; the best TEACHERS and the best COMPENSATION for teachers; a SCHOOL SEAT and a LIBERAL EDUCATION for every child in America, native or foreign born.

America is the great melting pot of the world, and the product of the melting pot must be competent, educated, loyal, moral AMERICAN CITIZENS.

1—That is the nation's duty to itself and its contribution to the social organization.

2—No politics in the schools, no race antagonism in the schools, no religious prejudice in the schools.

The schools are for all children; and all the children should there be taught and trained and graduated in that KNOWLEDGE WHICH IS POWER, and in an enlightened understanding of AMERICAN PRINCIPLES AND IDEALS.

The government of a democracy reposes in the hands of the people, and the success of that government, the progress, the prosperity, the perpetuation of the nation, depend upon the EDUCATION of the people, the ABILITY OF THE PEOPLE TO GOVERN.

Schools are the foundation stones of the republic. Make them STRONG and SOUND and SUFFICIENT.

NEW YORK, April 23—Rich men can no longer be judged by antediated standards of their heredity. The town house, country estate, a box at the opera, a shooting lodge and string of polo ponies used to mark the millionaire. But that is "old stuff" in America's unprecedented prosperity.

The splurge of the rich is now expressed in personal and private comfort rather than in outward show. Display is the symbol of the nouveaux riche, and even the new rich are conscious of finger pointers. Wealth still feeds its vanity, but without brass bands and fireworks.

One of the busy millionaires maintains a four-room apartment under another name at a smart hotel, and uses it about an hour or so a week, merely for a haircut and massage, and while undergoing these ministrations receives intimate business associates and dictates to a brace of stenographers.

A San Francisco capitalist brings his barber on trips to New York and is registered under the barber's name to avoid interviews. Nearly every millionaire traveling abroad these days takes as part of his entourage a physician, masseur and private secretaries, and is not listed among ship passengers.

There are any number of apartments on Park and Madison avenue and other exclusive areas maintained by yearly rentals of from $30,000 to $50,000 and used by out-of-town visitors on sporadic visits. They are unlisted in the house directory and attendants will appear oblivious of their occupancy.

One of the unique establishments in town is a magnificent private house in the East Sixties. Its cellars are stocked with rarest vintages and walls are hung with taxed tried treasures and works of old masters. A housekeeper and 14 servants are employed.

The gentleman who owns it is a middlewesterner and maintains the pied-a-terre the year around merely to entertain dinner parties for six weeks during the opera season. He has another town house with more sombre attenuations where he resides and where social high jinks are tabooed during his sojourn.

LONDON was once the old clothes center of the world, but today it is Brooklyn. The Bush Terminal maintains a sterilization plant there from which discarded garments are shipped to every corner of the globe. The old coat of today may adorn the Moroccan sheik or the Siberian mountaineer tomorrow. Europe has a shortage of old clothes because everybody is wearing them out. Few Americans these prosperous days wear out their habiliments. Old derbies are especially in demand to ship to Africa to decorate craniums of tribal chiefs. Top hats and cutaway coats without pants—they do not care for pants—also make an appeal among uncivilized. The Cash Clo men now pay the highest prices in history and are sharing largely in the prosperity.

THOSE silver-haired ladies with such an aura of dignity serving as floor clerks in fashionable hotels have a background for their aristocratic manner. They are recruited largely from the army of widows who have met financial reverses and are forced to make their way. The Waldorf had one clerk who once maintained a $30,000 a year apartment on the same floor over which she presided. In adversity she sought solace amid scenes of happier days.

An agonized matron writes to a New York newspaper a butler sixteen years in service has made away with rare wines costing $14,000 in prewar days, gives big dinner parties while she is in Europe, and refuses flatly to air her pet dogs and she wonders what to do. A fellow like that should be sent away without even a character.

AND another newspaper reader—you can have more giggles reading these letters to editors—thinks one of the tragedies of the metropolis is the sight of the spindly-legged tenement children to whom the live cow in the Central Park meadow is such an object of astonishing curiosity. From the taste of my milk at lunch today, there is at least one dairyman who would be similarly affected by the sight of a cow.

A NEW YORK hatter says he can tell a man's chief characteristics by the way he wears his hat and that recalls how the Elite Broadway Playe-rs' comedian convulsed Plattsburg, Mo., in the late 90's with: "Grandpa is in the barnyard with the cattle. You can tell him by his hat!"
